A toast to summer and free ice cream too!

COUNCILWOMAN Elinor Laiolo and husband Barney, an ex-mayor, toast each other with vanilla ice cream cones during the Second Annual Carmel Lick-In sponsored by Friar Tuck's and the Tuck Box. The lick-in on a sunny Saturday, June 21 was to celebrate the first day of summer by giving away free ice cream cones in a city with the inaccurate media impression that

Deja vu? Council ponders library annex again

By MICHAEL GARDNER

HOW MANY times have you read here that "the Carmel City Council will consider a proposed Harrison Memorial Library annex when it meets..."?

Well, add one more story to your list. And this may not be the end of it.

The Carmel City Council will consider a proposed Harrison Memorial Library annex when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, July 1 at city hall.

But then again maybe not.

The reason for the hesitation is that preceding the annex question is scheduled council discussion on a plan for a joint city-Pine Inn underground parking garage at the site, northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

If the council reaches an agreement with the Pine Inn, then City Administrator Doug Schmitz expects discussion on the annex to be delayed another month.

If the Pine Inn deal falls through, then the council probably will determine the fate of the annex.

The library annex and Pine Inn parking garage proposals are just two of numerous agenda items before the council. In other action the council will:

- Review a report from the general plan advisory committee on its "broad-based recommendations."
- Hear a recommendation to promote the recreation committee to a full-time city commission.

- Make appointments to the planning commission. There is little doubt that the present commissioners serving on a temporary basis will be reappointed.

- Receive a proposal from the Carmel Foundation for developing a senior citizen housing complex on the Dolores Street city-owned property now being used as a temporary parking lot.

- Consider the design for public restrooms at Piccadilly Park.

- Consider a request for a sculpture garden at Piccadilly Park.

- Consider a city response to the draft Car 1 Valley Master Plan.

- Review an agreement with the Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors for a full-time recreation director at the facility.

- Adopt a city position on proposed improvements to Highway 68 between Pacific Grove and Carmel Hill.

- Appoint a city representative to the Hatton Canyon Freeway Advisory Committee.

- Appoint a committee to recommend plans for a city-wide 70th birthday celebration Oct. 31.

- Adopt job specifications for a full-time recreation director.

Like most projects, the key to the Pine Inn proposal is money.

Pine Inn representatives originally proposed that they pay $10,000 per parking space and that Pine Inn receive credit for its existing spaces.

A 1983 study prepared for the council indicated that a 63-space facility would cost $15,000 per slot, or a total of about $957,000.

The council at its June 3 session unanimously agreed with Schmitz that the initial Pine Inn offer "is not in the best interests" of the city and gave co-owner Richard Gunner a month to make a counter-proposal.

The city basically has told Gunner that Pine Inn must pretty much go Dutch-treat on the proposal, depending on who gets how many new spaces.

A private consultant has prepared a cost analysis report, but it was not released by press deadline.

The Pine Inn proposal has thrown a monkey wrench into plans for a Harrison Memorial Library annex.

If the council okays a joint venture with Pine Inn, it seems likely that the annex question will have to be answered after an agreement is worked out with Gunner and his partners.

The big question for the annex, however, is not the Pine Inn proposal but whether it will be developed at all.

Past comments indicated that Councilmembers Helen Arnold and Bob Fischer are adamantly against an annex. Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo is between the two.

dedicated she prefers to expand on the present library site, but has hinted that she is not totally against the annex as a second choice should the expansion idea fail.

Councilman James Wright has not given an indication where he now stands. In past votes Wright has supported the annex.

Mayor Clint Eastwood says he'll support whatever the library board of trustees wants.

But what trustees want is subject to debate.

The library board now has two new members who haven't formally voted on the issue and another duo who don't seem to be convinced one way or the other.

New library trustees Selden Smith and John Kennedy have not voted on the annex. Smith has indicated he opposes the plan while Kennedy says he is open to any and all suggestions.

Current trustees Tom Duffy and George Rommel are fence walkers on this one, while board president Jack Billwiller appears to be the only trustee taking a firm pro-annex stand.

In a separate matter, the council tentatively is scheduled to receive a report from the General Plan Advisory Committee.

The committee is expected to finalize its report when members meet at 3:30 p.m. Friday, June 27 at city hall.

Hoping to be heard

Dear Editor:

For the past 22 months homeowners in the High Meadow area have been attending county subdivision meetings, planning commission meetings, board of supervisors' meetings, over the proposed Mahroom Development of 36 units on a two-acre site.

Finally, we obtained a plan amendment to the Greater Monterey Area Peninsula Plan in February 1985. After more indecisions and many more commission meetings, finally last month the planning commission voted in agreement with the amendment that 36 units was too much density and 18 or less be considered by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The board met on June 10, 1986 and a continued closed hearing is set for July 1 at 5 p.m.

Hopefully, the board will consider a sound land use management plan for this fragile area in Carmel or reduce this density to under 18.

Over 200 petitions by High Meadow homeowners have been submitted for this amendment.

Let's hope that the citizens are going to be heard!

Plea to the mayor, council

Dear Mayor Eastwood and members of the council:

I was both unhappy and surprised to learn of the termination of my term of office as a Carmel Planning Commissioner upon my return from a short vacation. I had served in that position for only 15 months of a term scheduled to end in May of 1988 and had expended a great deal of time and energy in learning about the responsibilities of the job and of relating those to the issues at hand. I had attended at city expense two conferences for new planning commissioners and was beginning, I thought, to use my new knowledge effectively and without bias.

I had never considered the appointment or the position as politically motivated nor had I assumed in any way that I was required to vote along lines that would please the mayor and the city council. I believe my educational background and work experience made me particularly well qualified to represent the interests of the elderly, the handicapped, and those of moderate means.

I also brought to the commission the current or recent experience of serving on the boards of the Carmel Foundation, the League of Women Voters, the Monterey County Ombudsman program, and the Monterey County Social Services Commission.

I would like to be reappointed to the commission and ask that my application be kept on hand for that purpose. I enjoyed the assignment, I admired the professional expertise of the planning department staff, and I hope very much that you and the members of the council will work together for the best interests of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Marjorie Montelius
Ex-Planning Commissioner

Reduce density

Dear Editor:

A lot has been in the papers lately regarding the Carmel Valley Master plan and the Environmental Impact Report. The EIR addresses many of the problems that are faced by local governments in an effort to preserve the beauty and rural atmosphere of our community.

While this is going on our board of supervisors is reviewing a recommendation from the Monterey County Planning Commission to amend the Master Plan assigned density of a tiny two-acre parcel of land near Carpenter and Outlook Drive. The present Master Plan would allow 18 units per acre or a total of 36 on this little two-acre knoll that can be seen from miles around! The planning commission is recommending that the density be reduced to a maximum of nine per acre or a total of 18 for the site.

This little hill is the highest point in its immediate vicinity. There was an obvious error of judgment when the Master Plan allowed such a high density on this parcel. The only way a developer can put 36 units on the property is to pile them up to three stories or more and dig a hole underneath to park the cars. This may be the solution in San Francisco or New York, but it should not be necessary in Carmel or Carmel Valley.

On July 1, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors will consider the planning commission's recommendation to reduce the maximum density in the Master Plan from 18 per acre to nine per acre or a total for the site of 18.

We hope the board of supervisors, who have in the past tried to preserve the natural beauty of this valley, will vote to lower the density to no more than nine per acre or a total of no more than 18 for this lovely little knoll.

Those dreaded typos

Dear Editor:

My face is as red as Mike Gardner's hair. He correctly pointed out in last week's issue that the current issue of Life magazine (July) misspelled the name of Carmel resident Bob Niemeyer. As the author of the story I stand guilty before you. Actually, I know as well as most folks that Bob's first name is exactly that, not "Bog" as we erroneously identify him. Bob was not only helpful when I was in Carmel to report Life's story, but he was kind enough to write me a follow-up letter sharing his feelings of affection for Carmel.

Therefore, it is with more than the normal measure of embarrassment that I offer this public apology for our mistake. A check with Life's editors in New York produced puzzlement as to how this could have happened. Our best guess is that the computer gremlins that occasionally wreak unintended havoc on our best laid plans were at work here. Yes, Mike, Life magazine, too, is victim to the dreaded typos. We don't like them any more than you.

Again, our heartfelt apologies.

Annex a good idea

Dear Editor:

Soon our city council will decide on whether or not the Harrison Memorial Library will have a detached annex on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

It seems to me that a detached annex that will provide 5,200 square feet with the possibility of expansion to provide an additional 2,200 square feet is the best solution to the library's space problems.

It would be a very good looking building and would certainly be an asset to our community, and is affordable: the Library Endowment Fund has, as of March 1985, $1.06 million available for this use. The estimated cost of the detached annex is $600,000.

In addition, Carmel must preserve and protect our historical buildings such as the Harrison Memorial Library building.

I urge that all those who share my feelings about the annex will express those feelings to the council.

Mrs. Felix Neri

Historical perspective

Dear Editor:

I am astonished and dismayed (to use our former mayor's favorite disclaimer) that there is so much of a flap over the replacement of Carmel planning commissioners. There is absolutely nothing new here.

Let us review the function of city commissioners: they are appointed by the mayor and ratified by the council; they serve only in an advisory capacity to the mayor and council.

As the electorate regularly changes its mind and elects new mayors and sometimes new council majorities, commissioners should expect to be replaced. Hopefully it can be done with some class and recognition for volunteer service.

I was one of four Carmel Library Commissioners replaced because the library commission was out of sync with the previous mayor and council. I learned about it from the media. None of us were given the courtesy of a reason why.

So, let's keep Mayor Eastwood's appointments in some kind of historical perspective. He's doing nothing that previous mayors haven't done.

Patricia Paul

Partial remedy

Dear Editor:

In 1984, the previous Monterey County Board of Supervisors approved a density credit to a subdivision on two acres of the most beautiful hillside in Monterey County. This approval would allow 36 housing units on two acres, or approximately three times the average density housing of the High Meadows area, off Highway 1, in Carmel.

For two and a half years, ongoing efforts to reduce this density have been exhausted by the concerned homeowners of High Meadows, Carmel Knolls and Carmel Views through painstaking hearings, meetings, letters, and petitions.

A partial remedy has finally come before the present board of supervisors: the planning commission has recommended a total density of 18 units for Mr. Mahroom's property. Let us hope that the supervisors will finalize this issue on July 1, by approving the total 18-unit density of the Mahroom project — to include low-income housing.

We request that the board not succumb to the dilatory tactics which have been so successfully used in the past by the developer and his paid spokesmen.

They're staying open

Dear Editor:

I'd like to clear up some very important issues concerning the Carmel Youth Center and what the future holds for us.

To begin with, the Center IS NOT closing for the summer. Yes, there has been some fear of that possibility in the past, but thanks to a wonderfully supportive community and hard work on behalf of our current executive board, we are going to hold our doors open and will continue to offer our kids activities and special programs throughout the summer.

Second, there has been a great deal of conjecture as to why full-time staff members are being let go right now, when it seems so vitally important to have a full complement of employees manning the fort.

It was at my own suggestion that the director and other full-time employees be let go. This was at a time when we had a $3,000 bank balance and were making ends meet a month at a time on a wish and a prayer.

Even now, with a little money set aside we need to think about this fall and winter. It's a long way to next year and until we know for sure what the city will do, we need to cushion ourselves for our future. Part-time employees can be hired at a cheaper rate and volunteers can be used to run activities and programs.

Lastly, I would like to commend our executive board and fund-raising committee members for their hard, hard work since this drive began. Not only have they been spending many hours formulating long-range plans, but they are also the very same people who are going to come in here this summer and volunteer some hours so that the center can run at maximum hours.

I have worked for over a year to help our board bring this center back to life. I will continue to support the goals we have set up and look forward to working with the Carmel Middle School this coming school year to keep our dances going.

Meanwhile, I support President Ron Faia and thank the entire board for having the courage to make the massive changes it took last year to bring the center back into this decade. With the continued backing from our wonderful parents, the Carmel business community... and a cooperated effort with the city, our youth center has the potential to be the best in the county. Please, give it time, and give it your support.

S.I. Hayakawa has a beef with Wilson's bill

By MICHAEL GARDNER

S. I. HAYAKAWA, wearing his trademark green and white knitted tam-o'-shanter, pulled the microphone down closer to his five-foot height and gave them what they came to hear:

"We have stopped the unstoppable and damn it, we'll do it again...Do we have to have a big brother type of government?"

It was not San Francisco circa the 1960s, but Big Sur in 1986.

S.I. Hayakawa may be slight of stature but he's certainly a giant in the eyes of Big Sur residents, who see the former senator (1977-81) and ex-president of San Francisco State College as the David who successfully battled the Goliaths over federalization of Big Sur.

Nearing 80, Hayakawa is no longer a powerful senator and his spoken words now are more monotone than fiery oratory, but still the occasion this time was a familiar one — the Friends of the Big Sur Coast gathering to raise funds and unite the community in another battle over federalization of Big Sur.

Ironically, it is Hayakawa's Republican successor — Pete Wilson of San Diego — who has resurrected the plan to bring Big Sur under the control of the federal government.

Wilson hurriedly introduced legislation on March 7 that basically will give the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture practically unlimited powers to condemn private property should the local land use plan be "significantly weakened" — a phrase that thus far has eluded simple and clear definition in the measure.

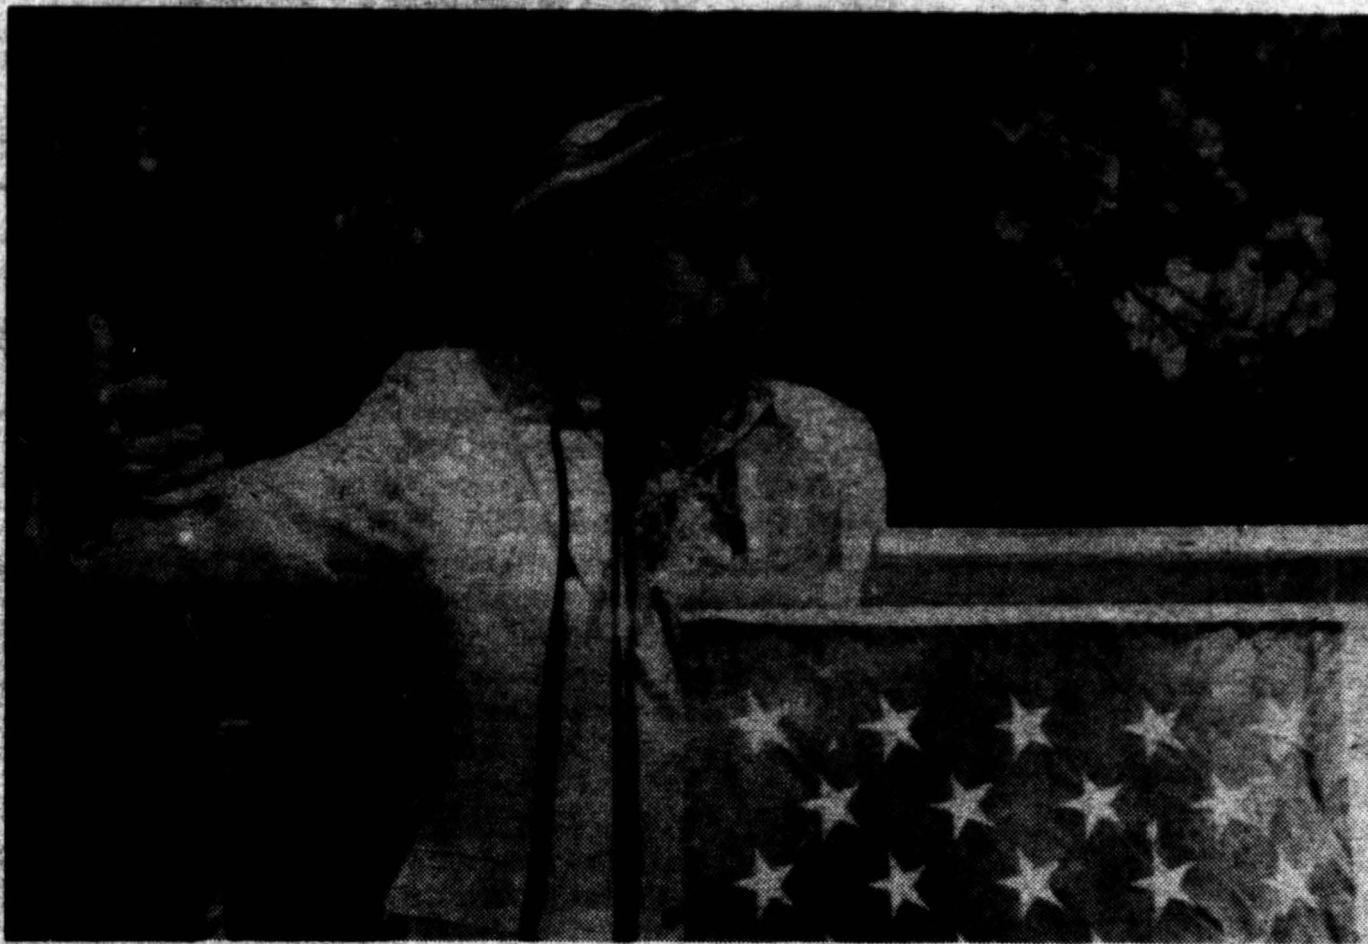

Fund-raising efforts now are underway to send a contingent to Washington D.C. July 31 — the day the bill gets its first committee review in the Senate.

From the day Wilson stepped off a helicopter at Nepenthe restaurant in Big Sur to find scores of angry pickets, the bill has been steadily picking up opponents, from Carmel Mayor and world-famous actor Clint Eastwood to Democratic Congressman Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley to the statewide Federation of Republican Women.

The only powerful ally to align himself with Wilson thus far has been Sen. Alan Cranston — the Democrat who tried to push through similar legislation half a decade ago only to run into nemesis Hayakawa.

Within earshot of the river and just yards from campgrounds overflowing with vacationers, the Friends of the Big Sur Coast gathered under the trees at the state park last Sunday afternoon for a steak barbecue and some politicking.

Officials from Morro Bay to Monterey

S.I. HAYAKAWA, the former U.S. Senator who fought past attempts to federalize Big Sur, was given a hero's welcome at Sunday's Friends of the Big Sur Coast barbecue. Hayakawa expressed optimism that residents crossed party lines and philosophical spectrums to see and be seen.

BUT THE real star of the day was Hayakawa, whose cause was popular, as evidenced by the auctioning of one of his $13.95 paperback Language-In Thought and Action for $550.

"Only if he signs it with a personal note," laughed successful bidder Patricia Smith Ramsey of Carmel Highlands when asked to pay up from her perch in a tree.

Hayakawa's subject, however, was no laughing matter to some 200 participants.

Speaking from a prepared text, but often diverging, Hayakawa demonstrated no mercy for his fellow Republican. "How does this area escape Pete Wilson and his crony Alan Cranston?" he demanded.

Hayakawa painted Wilson as a representative who has little understanding of the unique quality of Big Sur, its physical region and the spirit of its people.

"My successor in the U.S. Senate, Pete Wilson, says that Big Sur has to be protected for future generations. That is the only point about Big Sur on which he is correct," Hayakawa said.

"Years ago when I first came down to Big Sur to give some classes at Esalen, I learned that the people of this area are passionate environmentalists and are not about to let anything detrimental happen to this coast. That fact has escaped Pete Wilson," he continued.

"There is some excuse for Sen. Wilson. He doesn't know you, the people of the coast. He doesn't know the area. He doesn't know the issue or he would not have introduced his bill. But there is no excuse for Sen. Cranston. He should have learned his lesson by now. I always thought I was a pretty good teacher."

It was Hayakawa who battled Cranston's past efforts to federalize Big Sur. At times, Hayakawa had copies of War and Peace and The Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire at his seat in the Senate chambers, just ready for a filibuster.

"Ultimately, the bill died because of my sheer obstinate obstructionism," he boasted.

Hayakawa used a favorite cliché to question the necessity of the bill — "If it ain't broke, why fix it?"

Answering his own question, Hayakawa said it is his "personal, subjective and not entirely reliable opinion" that "Cranston is still mad at me...Somehow or other he persuaded Pete Wilson to carry it...If any of you have a used car with a bad engine you should try selling it to Pete Wilson."

LIKE ALL opponents of the bill, Hayakawa believes that visitors to Big Sur will increase at least twofold if the region is federalized.

"Real protection of the resource is not possible if too many people are using it at once. I understand that the late Ansel Adams once said when discussing the number of people brought to Yosemite, 'How do we now unbring them'."

Washington protocol is such that when can defeat Wilson's bill if they put up the good fight. "We have stopped the unstoppable and damn it, we'll do it again." (Michael Gardner photo.)

both state senators support a measure it's usually a hands-off situation, Hayakawa warned when discussing the chances it has of being defeated in the Senate.

"The mountain we must climb to accomplish this is much steeper. The Senate is a bit like a club. If the two senators from a state want something in that state, they generally get it.

"But we have climbed steep mountains together before and reached the top — wind-ed, but with a free and carefully-guarded environment still spread before us. We can and will do it again if we all climb the mountain together."

In closing to the cheers of the crowd, Hayakawa borrowed a hamburger sales pitch, "thank you for inviting me here today for this wonderful steak barbecue. If anyone asks 'where's the beef,' tell them I've got the beef and it's with Pete Wilson's bill."

With Hayakawa no longer in office, it appears that the leadership of the anti-Wilson bill movement — at least in Washington — will have to be assumed by Panetta, an influential Democrat in the House of Representatives.

Panetta promises to battle Wilson's bill, but told the Friends of the Big Sur Coast gathering that he does not hold much hope for its defeat in the Senate.

Instead, Panetta plans to introduce his own legislation in the House that has been developed by a coalition of local environmental interests, and government officials.

That measure would require the federal government to abide by the provisions of the Monterey County Land Use Plan.

The coalition also has developed a proposal to form an advisory council of federal, state, county and local interests that will oversee the protection of Big Sur, Panetta said.

Panetta added that he doubts the Senate will have local meetings for testimony on the bill, but he promised to lobby for House field hearings in Big Sur if Wilson's measure gets that far.

But most of all, Panetta stressed unity. "The most important thing we can do is to hang together," he said.

LOCAL OFFICIALS also had their say.

Sam Karas, chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, mostly talked about local control. "It really takes away all the power from the board of supervisors. It takes away home rule. I thought this administration in Washington was pushing home rule."

Karas also asked support of state Sen. Ken Maddy's SB 1717 that will go before voters as a bond act in November if lawmakers give it the okay. The measure would provide $500 million for open space acquisitions.

Supervisors, Karas said, want $25 million of the bond act to be allocated to the Coastal Conservancy, a state agency that will help the county acquire viewshed properties in Big Sur.

The bond act is a superior funding mechanism, Karas believes, because it will keep the federal government and its "strings-attached" policies out of Big Sur.

"We want to make sure there are no strings attached. If you take federal money there are strings attached," Karas said.

Addressing Wilson's contention that federal control is better since there's always the chance pro-environment supervisors could be voted out some year, Karas said, "What really galls me is they say supervisors don't last. Why doesn't somebody tell Sen. Wilson that senators don't last? Secretaries of agriculture don't last."

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who represents Big Sur, said the barbecue should have been a day to celebrate the passage of the Big Sur Land Use Plan after nine years in the works.

Instead, the LUP party has been dampened by Wilson.

When both senators from a state support a measure "all of the other senators take their hands off the bill. They defer to that state," Strasser Kauffman explained.

As long as Cranston supports the Wilson bill it will be "virtually impossible" to defeat it in the Senate, said Strasser Kauffman.

Strasser Kauffman too stressed that Panetta and the coalition's alternative plan must be supported if there is to be any chance to defeat Wilson's measure.

"It's absolutely essential that Congressman Panetta be reminded that we need him very much," she said. "It's not enough to simply say no to something you don't like — you have to give people a better alternative."

Similar comments were echoed by the continuing parade of speakers to the podium, which included Assemblyman Eric Seastrand, Carmel Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo, Pacific Grove Councilman James Hughes, Monterey Mayor Clyde Roberson, Morro Bay Councilwoman Rosemary Sheets, and Jim Josoff, president of the Friends of the Big Sur Coast.

Del Monte Forest density controls are postponed

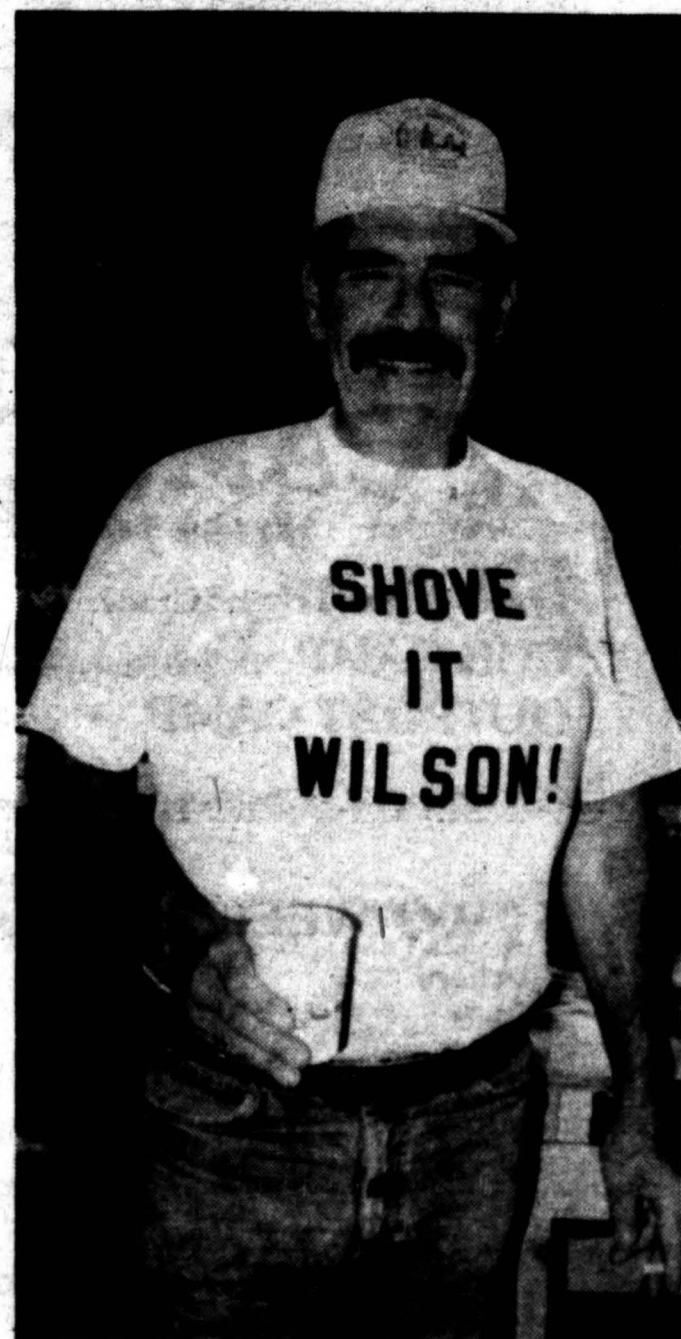

A HEARING before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors on proposed densities in Del Monte Forest — including the question of "granny housing" — originally planned for June 24 was postponed.

The continuance was at the request of Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who wanted more information from staff before the hearing is conducted.

The hearing was not rescheduled.

Council to tackle annex issue, parking proposal

indicated that the report, if finalized, will focus on "broad-based recommendations."

No specifics will be proposed, Evans said, because "such detail needs a great deal of further work."

The committee has been meeting every Friday for the past several weeks going through the general plan and looking for possible revisions.

For example, the committee has looked at a proposal to eliminate design review of residential buildings and revise the residential-limited commercial (RC) zone intended to buffer residents from business activities.

Recreation also will be the subject of three agenda items.

The council is to consider a plan to formulate a full-time recreation commission, which would operate under the same type of authority that is given to the forestry and cultural commissions.

The recreation commission probably would oversee all activities of the recreation program. The full-time recreation director, although reporting to Schmitz, probably will operate in a fashion similar to City Forester Gary Kelly or Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler.

The duties of the recreation director also will be discussed by the council.

The recreation director would be based at the youth center, under a proposal before the council. The council is expected to work out an agreement with the youth center board considering activities and the budget for the facility.

With restrooms nearing completion at Devendorf Park, the city is ready to begin talks for facilities at Piccadilly Park on Dolores Street.

The council is to review a proposed design for restrooms at Piccadilly Park that would be constructed on the southeast side adjacent to Toots Lagoon restaurant.

The facilities are somewhat controversial because there is some thinking on the council that the 4,000-sq. ft. Piccadilly Park simply is too small for a facility.

Planning commissioners also are to be appointed. Eastwood, Laiolo and Fischer at the June session fired the commission, named four new planners and retained Ken White.

Under city policy, the appointments were interim until applications could be solicited for a certain time period. There has been no indication that the temporary commissioners will not be reappointed.

Fireworks banned on Fourth of July

THE FOURTH of July is fast approaching and once again the city of Carmel is girding itself for another all-out assault by revelers.

To prevent damage to private and public property, to prevent injuries to celebrants and to avoid the melee that occurred a few years ago, absolutely no fireworks of any kind, including the so-called "safe and sane" variety, will be allowed on Carmel Beach or within the city limits according to the Carmel Police Department.

In addition no alcoholic beverages will be allowed on the beach after 10 p.m.

Fires on the beach will only be allowed in areas west of a line reached by the high tide. No fires will be allowed within 25 feet of any wall, vegetation or combustible materials. Materials being burned may not extend more than two feet above the base of the fire. Flames of the fire shall extend no more than five feet from the base.

No fires will be allowed on the beach after 10 p.m.

As for parking, several changes will be made to normal parking and traffic patterns, including no parking or vehicular traffic on Scenic Drive; no parking on San Antonio Street on either side, from Fourth Avenue to Santa Lucia Street; no parking on Eighth Street west of San Antonio; and on 13th Street no parking west of San Antonio.

THE JOY of reading is evident in Jasmin Reate's face as she shares a book with friend Jayme Colker at the Harrison Memorial Library children's department. Jasmin now is the co-star of a yet-to-be-released movie starring comedian Eddie Murphy. Details are on page 29. The Carmel City Council will consider a library annex July 1. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Council's biennial budget includes recreation director

IT APPEARS that the Carmel City Council will easily approve the hiring of a full-time recreation director — a move that eventually will lead to the city assuming a big share of the activities at the youth center.

The council June 30 is expected to approve a biennial budget that includes funding for the full-time recreation director.

The council will meet at 4 p.m. at city hall. Adoption of the biennial budget, which includes $5.9 million in 1986-87 and another approximately $6.6 million for 1987-88, originally was scheduled for June 19.

However, with Mayor Clint Eastwood and Councilwoman Helen Arnold absent, the bare council quorum of three postponed final action on the budget.

Acting Mayor Bob Fischer and Councilmembers James Wright and Elinor Laiolo did make several key preliminary decisions that will be incorporated into the final budget figures.

The council:

- Allocated $20,000 for a full-time city recreation supervisors based at the Carmel Youth Center.

- Refused over the objections of Laiolo to alter the proposed social and cultural grants recommended by the Community and Cultural Commission.

- Granted $7,500 to the Carmel Business Association contingent on a written agreement from the CBA stating how the funds will be used.

- Allocated $10,800 for a restroom maintenance contract.

- Continued discussion of a $10,000 grant to help fund a feasibility study for the proposed 1,500-seat Sunset Center auditorium. The mayor is to meet with the organizers, called the Friends of Sunset Center.

- Continued until June 30 a proposal to spend $9,770 for a police dog.

The three members of the council without much discussion reached a consensus to approve the $20,000 allocation to help pay the costs of a full-time recreation director.

From past statements, it appears that Eastwood and Arnold wholeheartedly support the proposal.

The city and youth center now are working on an agreement for the operations of the facility. That agreement is on the council agenda of July 1.

Early reports indicate that the city will be in charge of programs. The youth center responsibility basically will be fund raising and disbursement, much like the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS). The youth center board also will set some policies regarding the facility.

THE ONLY real disagreement among the three council members present came during discussion of the social and cultural grants annually distributed by the city.

Laiolo raised concerns that several agencies — specifically citing Meals on Wheels and Planned Parenthood — received large grants from Carmel compared to the percentage of funds given by other cities such as Monterey.

For example, Carmel would grant Planned Parenthood $4,375 while the much-larger city of Monterey is giving $5,000.

Wright, however, said the council should consider the grants in proportion to what is included in Carmel's budget rather than comparing the funds to Monterey.

Wright said Laiolo may have a point if comparing the Planned Parenthood grant to that given to the local We Care program or Carmel Youth Center.

But Wright said the city should take a look at its policies for 1987-88 and for now support the recommendations of the Community and Cultural Commission.

Laiolo did make a motion to trim the Planned Parenthood budget to $1,000 and provide another $1,000 to We Care. The remaining $2,375 simply would revert to the general budget.

The motion died for lack of a second as Fischer sided with Wright's sentiments.

Highway 68 task force ready to endorse plans

THE HOLMAN Highway Task Force appears ready to endorse "realistic" and "fundable" improvements to Highway 68 between Carmel and Pacific Grove.

That is according to Susan Whitman, a Pacific Grove councilwoman and member of the task force.

Whitman met with the Carmel City Council in a special session June 19 to discuss proposed improvements to Highway 68.

"This is my favorite part because now things get down to common sense," Whitman told the council as she outlined preliminary recommendations that will go before the full task force June 30.

The four proposals that the task force will consider adopting as its priorities are:

- A half-mile climbing lane for traffic going toward Carmel near the Presidio construction area. Estimated cost is $150,000.

- A second northbound lane from Highway 1 to the entrance of Community Hospital. Estimated cost is $645,000.

- A second lane southbound from the hospital to Highway 1. Estimated cost is $150,000.

- Widen shoulder at the hospital entrance southbound lane in front of the hospital. Estimated cost is $150,000.

However, Caltrans has informed the task force that the estimated costs should be increased by at least 30 percent, Whitman said.

The proposal for a northbound second lane by the hospital is partially funded already, Whitman explained, because Pebble Beach Co. has been required to provide improvements at the signal light intersection as part of its permit for the Spanish Bay resort project.

Whitman is convinced that these improvements are not pie-in-the-sky ideas.

"It is possible if we all work together," Whitman said.

The plan now is to formalize a priority list and have agencies on the Monterey Peninsula help finance an environmental impact report for the proposed improvements that could be funded.

Thus far, Pebble Beach Co., the city of Pacific Grove, Caltrans, Asilomar, the Defense Language Institute and Community Hospital have granted funds for the study, Whitman said.

The task force also plans to approach other cities and service organizations for financial assistance — basically because everyone will benefit from easier access to the hospital, Whitman said.

"The potential is unlimited," she said. "When we know exactly how much money we need is when we'll really go out and start asking."

ALTHOUGH there seems to be a focus on four improvements, there are numerous other suggestions that have been developed by the Holman Highway Task Force.

One of the most popular alternatives is to expand the entire length of Highway 68 to four lanes, but it also is the most unrealistic because of the cost and environmental dangers, Whitman said.

"It would be incredibly expensive," and an "incredible environmental impact," she said.

Other proposed alternatives include:

- An alternate-direction middle lane from Pacific Grove to Highway 1.

- A passing lane from Pacific Grove to the hospital.

- A third lane for traffic from Pacific Grove to the hospital.

- Improved access to Community Hospital through another road from Monterey.

- A grade-separated interchange and new gate to Pebble Beach.

Other recommendations from the committee that could be undertaken without financing concerns include: truck limits, improved MST transportation, encourage ride-sharing, and eliminate or postpone the new Pebble Beach gate near Haul Road.

Elimination of the new Pebble Beach gate would have to be approved by Monterey County because the access is a condition of the company's use permit for its Spanish Bay resort.

The former Carmel City Council wanted the gate because it would alleviate any potential traffic increases at the North San Antonio Street access to Del Monte Forest.

The council is expected to discuss the Holman Highway Task Force recommendations July 1.

Robert F. Talbott, necktie tycoon, dies

ONE OF the most famous names on the Carmel scene, Robert F. Talbott, founder of the internationally-famous Talbott Ties Inc., died June 18 after taking a walk near his Carmel Valley home.

Talbott was 80.

Born Nov. 15, 1905, in Grinnell, Iowa, Talbott and his wife Audrey moved to Carmel in 1950 and began producing their renowned handmade silk ties. The tiny cottage industry grew from just Talbott and his wife to a company with 200 employees, three stores in Carmel and Pebble Beach, a manufacturing plant in Monterey and an annual payroll of $4 million. The Talbotts supplied ties to more than 700 men's stores across the country and in Japan and Canada.

Not only was Talbott a successful entrepreneur (he also founded the Talbott Winery in Carmel Valley), but he was an active member of several organizations and boards.

He served on the Robert Louis Stevenson Board of Trustees and the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula Board of Directors. He was also the chairman of the fund-raising committee for the 50th and 55th Harvard Business School reunions in Cambridge, Mass. He was awarded the title this year of Alumnus Nobilissimus by Harvard University for his work with the school.

He graduated from Grinnell College in 1928 and Harvard in 1931 with a master's degree in business administration.

He is survived by his wife; a son Robert of Carmel Valley; three brothers, John of Delray Beach, Fla., Stanley of Cincinnati, and Arthur of Tiburon; and three grandchildren.

At Mr. Talbott's request, no services were held. The family suggest memorial contributions to the Community Hospital, PO Box HH, Monterey, 93942, or the Harvard Business School.

(Editor's note: A more in-depth look at Mr. Talbott's life will appear in next week's issue.)

Fireworks banned from state beaches

ALL FIREWORKS, including the so-called "safe and sane" variety will be prohibited from state beaches, including Carmel River Beach and Monastery Beach, on the Fourth of July.

According to the state Department of Parks and Recreation, "No person shall possess, discharge, set off, or cause to be discharged, in or into any portion of a (state park) unit any fireworks, torpedoes, rockets, explosives, or substances harmful to the life or safety of persons."

The parking lot at Carmel River State Beach off Scenic Road will be closed at sunset. The three beaches comprising the Carmel River State Beach (the one off Scenic, Monastery, and the middle beach behind Carmel Meadows) will be closed at 9 p.m.

The 'continuing' saga of the planning commission

By NANCY HILLS

"TO BE Continued" could be the title for the June 25 Carmel Planning Commission meeting.

However, despite continuing seven agenda items to June 25, the commissioners were able to approve use permits for Brentano's Books and The Peppercorn in Carmel Plaza, grant a subdivision for four condominiums with a use permit for an underground garage on Junipero Avenue, and cut Paul Laub's request for five sliding glass doors down to two.

Continued applications included a master use permit for a remodel of the Gould Building on the corner of Sixth Avenue and San Carlos Street and use permit amendments for three lots bordering Mission Trails park.

Reasons for the seven continuances ranged from the unfamiliarity of the new commissioners with ongoing projects, to applicants' requests to take items off the agenda.

It was the first time six of the seven new planning commissioners met to vote on issues and applications. Fred Keeble, who was recovering from an operation, had not yet been sworn in and was the only absent commissioner when Chairman Ken White and commissioners Olof Dahlstrand, Bill Brown, Ed Hicks and Carla Ramsey made their first decisions as planning commissioners. They were sworn in June 11, during a study session.

One item that did receive unanimous approval from the new commissioners was Earl Walls' project of four condominiums with an underground garage on Junipero between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

The application still must go through design review but the subdivision and use permit granted to Walls allows him to build a two-story building housing four condominiums. One unit is planned at 1,288 sq. ft., one at 1,364 sq. ft. and two units at 1,464 sq. ft.

However, staff planner Brian Roseth explained to the commission that, in the staff's opinion, the six spaces in the underground garage were designed so cars would have to back out to exit. The recommendation was to either redesign the garage or reduce the number of spaces. The commission voted unanimously to accept the staff's recommendations.

According to Roseth, Walls submitted plans for six condominiums in 1983, received approval, but did not start development.

In 1984, the area was rezoned into the R-4 specific plan which reduced its density, allowing only three units. Four would be allowed only if one was designated as affordable housing.

When Walls returned in 1985 to begin his condominiums, the planning commission and city council found there was an inequity in the new zoning restrictions since he had started his project prior to implementation of the new general plan.

The city rezoned Walls' property from the R-4 zone and placed it into the Service-Commercial district and allowed Walls to build four condominiums without having to designate one as affordable housing.

PAUL LAUB'S sliding glass doors for the Paradise Building on the corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street had a return engagement before the planning commission. Laub's application requested five sliding glass doors, four to replace the large plate glass windows facing Dolores Street and one to replace the easternmost window on Ocean Avenue.

A previous application appeared before the old planning commission on May 14, requesting the four doors on Dolores Street. Laub told the commissioners then that he asked for four because it looked more balanced and he would settle for two. When he said he did not want to resubmit because there were no other alternatives, the request was denied.

An appeal was filed with the city council for June 3, but Laub removed it from the agenda and reapplied to the planning commission.

His explanation to both sets of commissioners for applying for the doors was that he wanted to improve the exits in the building and relieve pedestrian congestion at the entrance on Ocean Avenue.

After Laub explained his request and reasons, Commissioner Brown told Laub "I thought this was down to two (doors)."

Laub said looking at it "balance-wise," he "felt better" with the five. He also responded to Brown's query about T-shirts in the show windows; he said that they would probably stay.

"Merchants aren't going to want to give up their display," Laub said.

Observing that "the change was creating a building that is essentially all open, like an open bazaar," Dahlstrand said, "I wonder seriously if that is the kind of character we are looking for."

After Commissioner Bruce Roberts read the code affecting merchandise marts and Ramsey expressed concern about the amount of foot traffic that would be added to the Dolores Street sidewalk, the commission voted to allow one door on the Dolores Street side and the front door on Ocean Avenue.

IN OTHER business, the commission:

- Requested Alan Landi resubmit plans for a home on the west side of Monte Verde between Eighth and Ninth avenues.

The Forestry Commission had denied Landi's application to cut down a large Cypress and a pine tree located on the property. Landi told the commission he could not build his home without cutting down the trees, but he would keep all the trees in the front of the house. Drainage problems on the land also restricted the home's location on the lot.

After Dahlstrand and Hicks both suggested he move the house farther up the lot to save some pine trees, the commission voted unanimously for resubmittal.

Landi told the commission after the vote he had already submitted two sets of plans and had them cut down from 2,500 sq. ft. to 1,300 sq. ft. He said he had not expected a forestry commission-type review, but only a design review. He said he could cut down the trees by himself and wait six months before starting construction. (By law, if the forestry commission denies a permit to cut down a tree on private property, the owner can cut the tree down, but then has to wait six months before starting any kind of construction on the property.)

- Brentano's Books and The Peppercorn both received use permit and design review approval for new stores in Carmel Plaza.

Owner Donald Seydel told the commission The Peppercorn will be a contemporary home furnishing store like the recently-closed Byron & Schiller, formerly located in the Plaza. It will be located in the Left Bank Cafe, which closed June 1, and a portion of the Harbinger restaurant.

Both Brentano's and The Peppercorn's exterior changes to the Plaza received approval from the commission.

- New owners Peter and Mary Savale were granted a use permit for Sade's bar on Ocean Avenue.

Valley Kiwanis to host horse show

The 16th annual Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club Summer Horse Show will be held Sunday, June 29 at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club. Dr. Steve Austin, secretary-manager of the event, announced.

"This year, to the 62 classes in the Western and English divisions, we've added two categories for riders nine years and under," Austin said. "This will give young riders a chance to compete in a class of their own."

He urged horsemen and horsewomen of all ages to enter as soon as possible.

"Premium sheets for entry have been mailed to 500 people in the area," he said. "And we've distributed many more to feed stores, tack shops, riding stables and Western stores."

Admission to the show is free to the public and the grounds of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on June 29. Kiwanis Club members will man food booths and proceeds will benefit Carmel Valley youth projects.

New principals Pallastrini, Douglas

Carmel school board makes it a family affair

THERE ARE now two "Principal Douglases" in the Carmel Unified School District.

And to answer the logical next question, they are related — husband and wife to be exact.

Former River School teacher Sharon Douglas and ex-Carmel Middle School vice-principal Karl Pallastrini are expected to be formally confirmed as principals on their respective campuses by the board of education July 1.

Trustees will meet at 7 p.m. in the middle school library.

Douglas, a veteran teacher of 26 years including 17 in the Carmel district, is married to Bob Douglas, the teaching principal at Captain Cooper School in Big Sur.

A principalship is not new to Douglas — she was teaching principal at the old Carmel Woods School from 1978-1981 when that campus was closed and students transferred to River School.

She also served as assistant principal at River School for four years before moving to Woods School.

Douglas replaces Rosemary Montgomery, who has been promoted to the central office post of Director of Curriculum and Instruction.

At middle school, Pallastrini is promoted to fill the vacancy created when Frank Lynch recently resigned to become principal of Petaluma High School.

Pallastrini came to the Carmel district from Pacific Grove in the fall of 1985, assuming the position of vice principal of the middle school. He had been vice principal of the Pacific Grove Middle School from 1980-84.

Once formally appointed, the administration of the district should be settled after several domino-effect moves involving several people.

Rich Hawkins, former director of instruction who had served several months as acting superintendent, resigned after Bob Infelise was named superintendent.

Then-Carmel High School Vice Principal Joe Feldeisen replaced Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly for the 1985-86 year. Feldeisen was replaced by Dee Dresser, who had been the vice principal at the middle school — Pallastrini's position for the just-concluded year.

Feldeisen then opted to return as vice principal and Lynch resigned.

So, Douglas assumes Montgomery's position while Montgomery takes over for Hawkins, whose post had been vacant. Marie Ishida of Santa Cruz High School is the new principal of the high school replacing Feldeisen who takes over for Dresser as assistant principal at the high school.

Dresser resumes her duties as middle school vice principal — a job held by Pallastrini who is now the CMS principal.

Now all that remains is filling Douglas' teaching position.

In other action July 1, the board will:

- Consider how to spend $547,000 in lottery funds.

- Review a proposal to lease the high school lot for tourist parking. Bob Harr plans to offer a shuttle service to Carmel.

- Hear a proposal from the private Waldorf School to lease part of the closed Carmelo School campus.

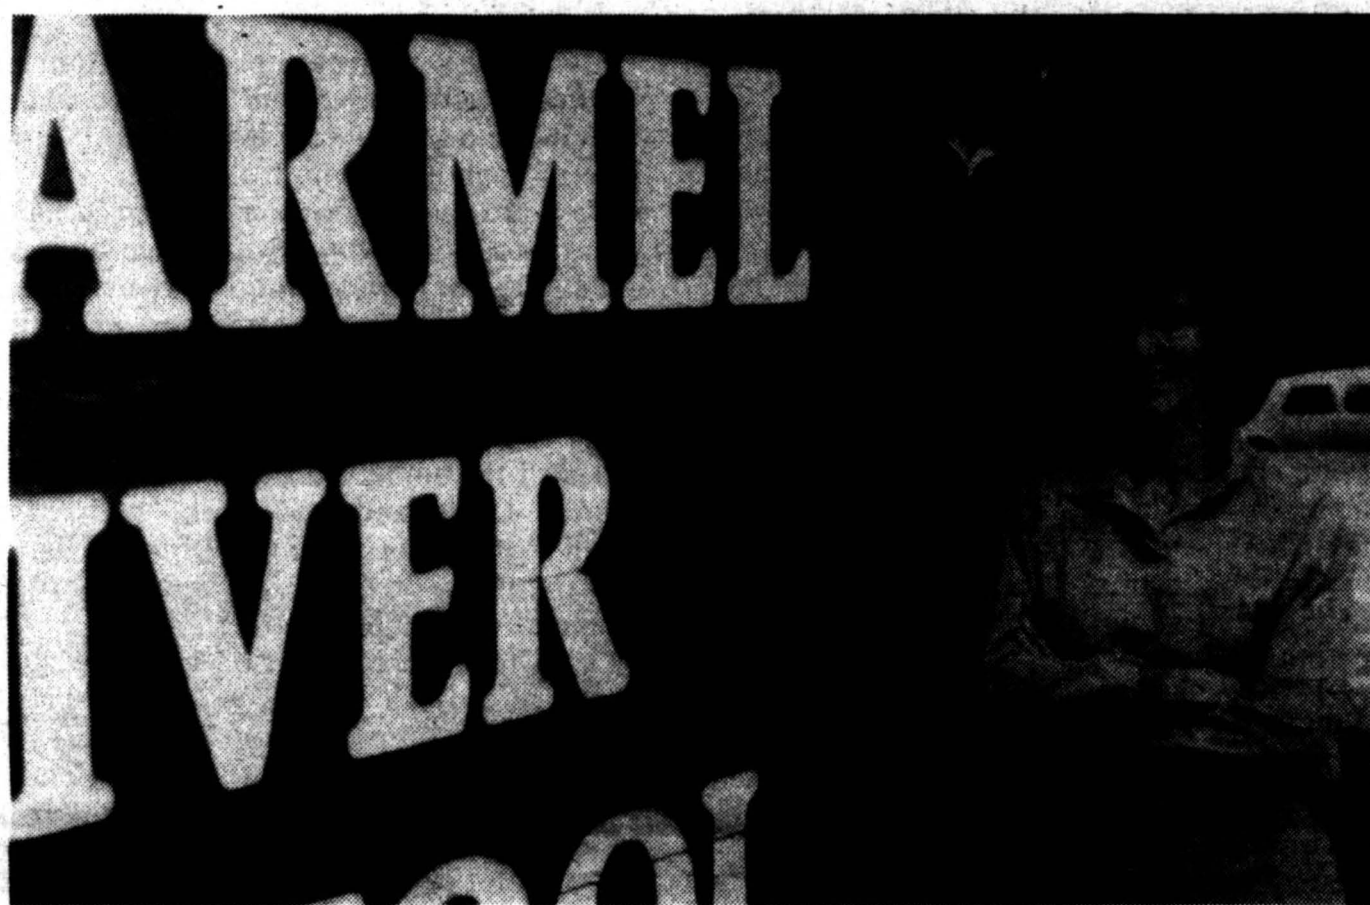

Rep. Panetta to hold constituent hours

REP. LEON Panetta announced today that he will meet with constituent from 3 to 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, July 2, at the Seaside City Hall Conference Room, 440 Harcourt St.

For more information, call 649-3555.

Public forum on CV master plan slated for July 2

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman will hold a public forum in the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea July 2 to discuss the progress being made on a new Carmel Valley Master Plan.

"Carmel city residents traditionally have taken a serious interest in planning efforts for the Valley," Strasser Kauffman said. "They should be fully included in public debate on the recently released Environmental Impact Report."

Accompanying Strasser Kauffman will be members of the Monterey County Planning Department staff. The public has a total of 45 days to review and comment on the draft document. Final comments on the plan must be made to the planning staff in writing before July 10.

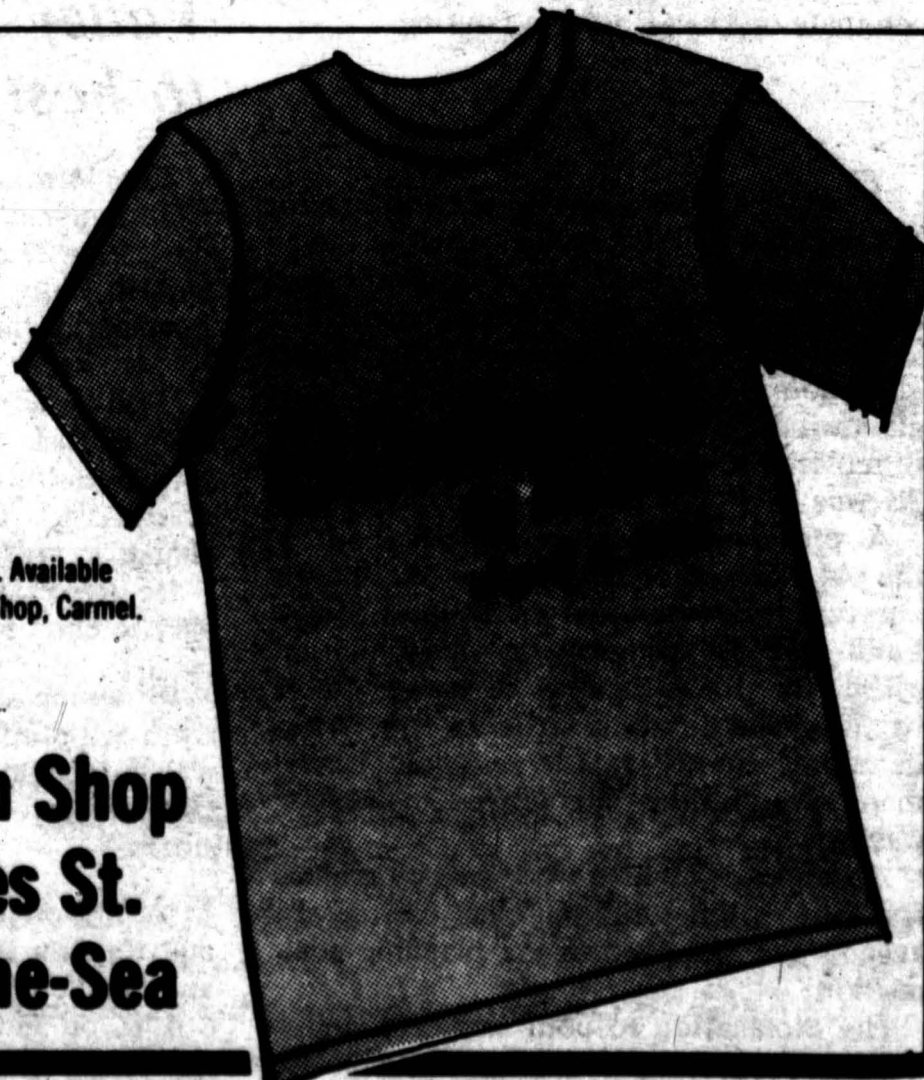

The forum will be held Wednesday, July 2, from 7 to 8 p.m. in Carpenter Hall of Sunset Center.

"I am looking forward to meeting with Carmel citizens once again. Land use decisions made for Carmel Valley will have potential impacts far beyond the immediate Valley boundaries. It is therefore important that wide public participation takes place in the review of this latest document," Strasser Kauffman said.

RON ALLEN awaits a pitch as son Matthew Allen gets ready to rip it at the Carmel Youth Baseball league's Home Run Derby June 21 at Larson Field. The senior Allen was one of the organizers of the event, which netted $700 for the league. Young Allen won his age division in the homer contest. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Home Run Derby nets youths $700

MORE THAN $700 was raised with the use of bats and softballs at the Carmel Youth Baseball league's Home Run Derby at Larson Field June 21.

According to organizer Ron Allen, more than 150 people participated in the fund raiser, raising more than $700 for insurance and equipment purchases for the league.

The home run derby was followed by an awards dinner, auction, raffle and dance at Crespi Hall at the Mission. Gary Gray, announcer for the derby, also served as auctioneer for the event.

Winners in the home run event were (male and female divisions):

Ron Allen, Marsha Pease, 30 and over; Mark and Susan Bordanaro, 18-29; Jason Pokrzywinski, Shelley Smith, 17-15; Bryan Driscoll, Lesa D'Ambrosio; Mario Bertalucci, Missy Cardoza, 11-12; Steamer Pease, Stacey Gray, 9-10; Matthew Allen, Jenny Elliot.

Derby participants, who paid $1 for three balls (50 cents for three for the youngsters) pitched from a pitching machine, won a variety of prizes donated by individuals and businesses. The longest homer was one measured at 280 feet, hit by Mark Bordanaro.

BEHIND THE LINES

BY MICHAEL GARDNER

Rendezvous at Sunset Center?

THERE IS a growing rumbling around town from residents who must compete with long lines of camera-toting tourists all jostling for position as early as two hours before a regularly-scheduled Carmel City Council meeting.

The sentiment, it seems, is that open citizen participation is taking a beating because of the celebrity status of our mayor, Clint Eastwood.

The city to its credit has adopted a plan to allow residents in first and actually reserves seats for those present who want to address a specific topic. But once addressing the council, it's out you go and let someone else in.

Speakers and video monitors are provided for those waiting in line so they don't miss one exciting minute.

This policy, although well-meaning, is flawed. It excludes, sometimes for up to two to three hours, those Carmelites who simply prefer to get their information first-hand rather than read about it in the papers.

The practice also is discouraging residents from regular participation in a town that prides itself on open and accessible government.

And with summer tourists growing in numbers, the crowds in front of city hall seem to be getting bigger rather than smaller, as Clint had predicted in the campaign.

One resident, Howard Nieman, has chosen to take on city hall over this issue and it does not appear that his battle can be dismissed lightly.

Nieman has written a thorough analysis of the predicament and has questioned whether the council admittance policy sidesteps the spirit of the Ralph M. Brown Act — the state's open meeting law.

City Atty. Don Freeman is in receipt of the 10-page letter, but won't talk to the press about it. Who can blame him? Freeman's quandary is that he needs to have the council address the issue and word is that he's going to talk to them individually before July 1.

If nothing else, perhaps Nieman's letter will force the council to publicly address this growing concern.

Wait! Hold the presses! Suddenly, while in the middle of writing this column, Clint issues an "open letter" to Carmel residents about the crowds at the meeting. (See page two.)

Okay, now back to the column.

But instead of complaining, let's take a look at some alternatives should the council choose to open discussion on how to remedy the problem at least until the tourist season is over.

ONE SUGGESTION has been to schedule the council sessions in the early a.m. before the tourists wake up.

Another comes on the heels of the June 19 special meeting sans Clint. The police announced to the two dozen or so tourists that Clint would not be there. They disappeared faster than the bad guys in one of his movies.

Seriously folks, the most often discussed alternative is to move the meetings to Sunset Center.

Easier said than done.

The Sunset Center auditorium is booked sometimes two years in advance and it would be difficult to arrange a regular council date around performances of the Bach Festival, music society, film society, symphonies, etc.

Security also would be a problem at the theater with its many entrances and back rooms.

A more likely candidate is Carpenter Hall, which seats about 100 more than the council chambers.

Still, the hall is booked on Tuesdays after October by Gymboree, a program that brings in big bucks for the city. Gymboree is scheduled in other peninsula locations during the week so changing the date is nearly impossible without forcing the organization to abandon Carmel.

Carpenter Hall is free Mondays at least through December should the council choose to change its meeting days.

Queried, Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler suggests Wednesdays as the most flexible date in the schedule at the facility.

Police Chief Jack McGilvray responds that security at Carpenter Hall could be accommodated easier than at the auditorium.

The ball, as they say, is in the council's court.

A LETTER TO SANDY

Gremlins provided me with an interesting look at how Clint handled formal noticing to the fired planning commissioners.

Chairwoman Sandy Swain, who served 10 years, was sent the following letter dated June 4, the day after the council action:

"Dear Sandy: This letter is to notify you that your term of office as a member of the planning commission of the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea has been terminated by action of the city council at their regular meeting of 3 June, 1986.

"On behalf of the city council, I want to thank you for your service to our city on the planning commission. As indicated in the recent election, change and reorientation are necessary elements in city government.

"Jeanne Brehmer, city clerk, has requested that you contact her regarding the statement of economic interests that must be filed with the secretary of state 30 days after leaving office.

"Thank you again. (Signed) Clint Eastwood, mayor."

NEW CLINT BOOK

Bruce Roberts, Lisa Von Saltza and Phyllis Howard are at it again — on the July Fourth weekend they plan to have another photo book out on Clint to raise funds for the Carmel Youth Center.

You may remember their first offering called On the Trail With Clint. This one promises to be bigger and better.

Photographers donating their images include John Livingston, Holly McFarland (the Pine Cone's lenswoman) and yours truly.

The book will sell for $3 with $1 going to the youth center.

A COUP AT CITY HALL?

To hell with South America, we have our own coups right here and the photos to prove it?

Councilman Bob Fischer took over the city council's June 19 budget session with Clint out of town filming his Heartbreak Ridge.

Pictures snuck during the session clearly show Bob behind the "Mayor Eastwood" nameplate. A tourist even took a quick one while nobody was looking.

Bob's sheepish excuse when confronted? "I forgot to move it."

Likely story. And, now there's someone in Des Moines with a framed photo of Bob showing it to Aunt Ethyl as Clint.

IS KARIN BEING REALISTIC?

I have admired Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman's pro-environment stands for some time now. But I have been puzzled over a recent statement.

Karin told me she supports cutting in half the density for the Mahroom project over in High Meadow so that the developer has a "realistic" idea of what the county is looking for.

The idea, of course, is to save the county and the developer time and money. A good idea at that.

So why can't Karin bring herself to take a strong stand on the monstrous Point Lobos Ranch project? Is there anybody out there (besides the developer of course) who truly believes that two 120-room hotels, about 40 homes, 500-seat convention center and equestrian center is "realistic" for that site?

Just in time for July 4

A NEW Carmel Beach access stairway — the second in less than a month — has been completed and will be ready for use just in time for the July Fourth three-day holiday. The access was built by Tim Mallery construction near 12th Avenue. Additional stairs are planned at Ninth and 10th avenues. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Let's hope that board Chairman Sam Karas — also a friend of the environment — forgets protocol for one day and brings up the issue even though it's not in his district.

Actually, a reassessment of the entire Carmel Area Land Use Plan and "realistic" guidelines would far better serve the community and developers rather than lip service to hydrology and traffic studies.

THIS KID'S ALL RIGHT

On a sunny day recently I was walking down Mission Street when a kid with a face I vaguely recognized bummed 50 cents off of me for bus fare.

I forgot about the two quarters by the next block, but he didn't. On a grouchy, coffeeless Monday a.m. I found the 50 cents on my desk — a surprise that made me forget it was Monday.

This honest kid is Mark Underdown, son of Gus and Joyce Underdown of Carmel. I think he deserves a pat on the back, or at least his name in the paper.

QUICK QUIPS

If someone asked me, the improvements at Piccadilly Park are great except for the pond fence, which is worse than what was there before. Why not grapestake there too?

The five planning commissioners on their financial interest forms report very little Carmel holdings. Only Bill Brown, publisher of this paper, and Carla Ramsey, of Ocean Avenue Realty, have a financial interest in Carmel businesses.

Speaking of, Fred Keeble still isn't an official planning commissioner, having been recuperating from an operation the past few meetings and not able to attend a swearing-in ceremony.

Anne Palk has a pre-printed sign in front of the cash register at her Book Room directing folks to the Hog's Breath. A result, no doubt, of numerous inquiries.

McGilvray reports that overtime costs are about $400 for security at council meeting since Clint's election.

Tyler is sporting a new tie decorated with ice cream cones. If you can't live without one, he plugs Talbott Ties as the place to go.

Rumor is that the Pine Inn-city venture for an underground parking lot may have a new partner — the Christian Science Church. No one's talking to the press, but there's insider discussion aplenty.

Marjorie Montelius, fired planning commissioner, has applied for her old job. Any bets?

Strasser Kauffman wants consensus on marathon

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman wants to ensure that "community consensus in writing" is reached before the Big Sur International Marathon is run again.

Organizers of the marathon are trying to am up support for another race in 1987 as aaring before the Monterey County Board Supervisors meets.

Supervisors will consider a proposed resolution on continuing the marathon when they meet at 4 p.m. Tuesday, July 1 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

The resolution from supervisors has been requested by Caltrans and California Highway Patrol officials, who will make the final determination on whether there will be a second Annual Big Sur International Marathon.

Supporters of the marathon have met with Big Sur residents and merchants, who oppose the race because it closes Highway 1 for most of the day, keeping tourists away and locals stuck at home.

Opponents also fear that entries will not be kept at a manageable level and question what could happen in the event of an emergency with the highway closed.

The Big Sur International Marathon committee promises to move race time to 7 a.m. and not close Highway 1 north of Mal Paso until about 9 a.m., which would allow more residents use of the road longer.

In addition, the committee proposes to sponsor a race fair the Saturday before the marathon in Big Sur to encourage runners to patronize local businesses.

The marathon — even without a major sponsor — raised $10,000 for charities in its initial running in April.

Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas, who also is the chairman of the board, numerous times has stated his support of the marathon.

However, Strasser Kauffman remains unconvinced, although she has praised the Big Sur International Marathon committee for its first race.

Indications of Strasser Kauffman's concerns are contained in correspondence she has had with committee members and to Caltrans' Tom Pollock, who will make a commendation to the Sacramento headquarters.

In her latest letter dated June 16 and mailed to Brian Lyke, manager of Escalen in Big Sur, Strasser Kauffman explained that her office "continues" to receive "complaints regarding appropriate safety measures, shuttling arrangements, full community participation, and benefit to the specifically impacted areas."

Strasser Kauffman proposes that subcommittees be appointed to iron out the differences between the Big Sur merchants and residents, and those who support the marathon.

"I REMAIN confident that a consensus can be reached leading to specific commitments," Strasser Kauffman continued.

"Such commitments should be presented in writing to Caltrans and to any other jurisdiction from which support is desired. This will provide assurance to all that any future marathon will be safe, manageable and limited in scope."

In another letter dated June 5, Strasser Kauffman wrote the committee following her attendance at one of the executive board meetings.

"It was clear that even among yourselves a good number of concerns remain to be worked out in detail, in particular the shuttling of local residents, the medical contingencies, the potential scope of the event, numbers of runners, amount of money targeted to be raised, and general physical support," the supervisor wrote.

"Citizen complaints continue to come into my office. These complaints are valid and address themselves to the very issues you are now discussing.

"Therefore, I remain confident that — given some time and outreach effort on your part — the legitimate complaints can be resolved."

Strasser Kauffman suggested that the committee not rush a decision out of Caltrans, the CHP and supervisors until a "written agreement" is prepared on "future organizing principles."

Mahroom debate before supervisors

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors July 1 once again will try to reach resolution on density for the proposed Mahroom condominium project.

Supervisors will consider a proposed amendment to the Carmel Area Land Use Plan that would halve the density for the project. The proposed amendment is scheduled for 5 p.m.

Neighbors in the High Meadow area petitioned the county for a reduction in the density. The original density is 36 for the approximately two-acre site. Neighbors want a maximum of 18 units.

The Mahroom project is in the area known as High Meadow, generally southeast of Highway 1 near Outlook Drive.

The proposal has been before the county for more than a year, and has been shuffled between the planning commission and supervisors several times.

Supervisors meet in the county courthouse in Salinas.

CV Youth Center hosts music in park

THE COAST Ridge Boys will provide the entertainment at the first Music in the Park barbecue hosted by the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

The event will be held from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, June 28 at the center, 25 Ford Road in Carmel Valley.

In addition to the entertainment and barbecue there will be activities for children, the pool will be open recreational swims as well as occasional relay races, and there will be a horseshoe tournament and volleyball.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD EMILY LURIE WINS PIANO COMPETITION

Eight-year-old pianist Emily Lurie of Monterey won first prize in her age division of the 1986 Stravinsky Awards International Piano Competition at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana.

The daughter of Monterey physicians Michael K. Lurie and Sadayo A. Kanaya, Emily studies piano with Renee Bronson of Carmel and attends school at Santa Catalina School in Monterey.

Emily has been winning local piano competitions since she was five years old, but this was the first competition she has won which has a national and international standing. The Stravinsky Competition, named in honor of Igor Stravinsky and his pianist son Soulima, attracted approximately 200 young pianists ranging in age from six to 26 from all over the United States (and from several foreign countries). A total of $14,000 in prize money was distributed to the winners of the five age divisions.

In Lurie's age division (up through age 8) there were 40 young pianists selected in the preliminaries, 20 in the semi-finals and 10 in the finals. As one of the five division winners, she won a cash award and performed Haydn's F Major piano sonata in an awards concert which will be broadcast later this month over a classical music station in Urbana.

WRITERS CLUB RELEASES ANTHOLOGY

The Monterey Peninsula Writers Club recently released an anthology of its members works, Visions 1986, the first edition of what will be an annual collection. It is a non-profit local magazine featuring club members' unedited short literary works, including travel pieces, short stories, essays and poems.

The magazine includes works by Carmel writers, George and Joy Bestor, Leland Lewis, Phil Shepherdson, Ann Woolworth, and Pebble Beach writer Dorothy Kimmel. Dr. Lewis "Ig" Heniford of Carmel was one of the advisors and Carmel's Jerome and Frederika (Blair) Hastings were among the magazine's patrons. The cover and some interior design work was done by recent North Salinas High graduate Richard Novencido.

The magazine is available for $5 at Thunderbird Bookstore in The Barnyard, Walden Books at Del Monte Shopping Center, and Bookworks in Pacific Grove. For more information contact Bernice Craig-Pires at 649-6891.

UP, UP AND AWAY WITH ARTHRITIS

Thousands of helium balloons will be riding high over Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties on June 27 and 28 to celebrate the first annual McDonald's Restaurants—Arthritis Foundation Balloon Days.

"Up, Up and Away With Arthritis!" will provide area residents with the opportunity to support the Monterey Bay Area Arthritis Foundation's programs and services while becoming eligible to win a hot-air balloon ride over the Salinas Valley.

Helium balloons will be available for a $1 donation on June 27 and 28 at all McDonald's Restaurants in Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito Counties and in Gilroy—16 locations in all. Purchasers of the balloons may release their balloon which, if found the longest distance from point of release and returned, will win them—and the finder of the balloon—a ride in an 80-foot-tall red and yellow hot-air balloon from "Balloons By The Sea" of Salinas.

The hot-air balloon will appear at the McDonald's Restaurant at the Northridge Shopping Center in Salinas Friday morning June 27 so contest participants can get a first-hand look at this fabulous flying machine. The public is invited.

The Monterey Bay Area Arthritis Foundation offers programs and services for arthritis patients, their families, the public and health professionals. The foundation also funds research into the cause and cure for arthritis, America's number one crippling disease.

For more information about "Up, Up and Away With Arthritis!" or services available through the foundation, call 373-6664, 757-9977 or 462-6473.

Volunteer support

THIS IS round-up time. Since money alone does not ensure success, and our task at the Carmel Youth Center is difficult, we need your help. You have given of your money, now we are asking for your time. Behind every successful community effort, there is a strong support system called volunteers.

Do you have a skill/talent to instruct a class that might appeal to our teens? Do you have time to teach/supervise/chaperone a teen activity? Do you have time to play cards/games/pool/ping pong or have office skills? Expert or not, we will be needing you. Let's show our teens we care by getting involved. Call 624-3285 or drop by the office for a chat, Monday-Friday from 12-3 p.m. Come share your ideas with us and sign up as a volunteer.

The board is stepping down to run CYC on a volunteer basis until, hopefully, a director is hired by the city. Negotiations between city and CYC have begun, and will be firmed up when the city's budgeted recreation funds have been allocated.

In the meantime, our board of directors' secretary, Cathleen Connell, will be whipping up something special from behind the snack bar to please both Mom and CYC members. Join us for lunch, if you like, this is get-acquainted time. I'll be there to answer the phones, your questions, some office work and most importantly, help Cathleen with the dishes!

The famous rummage/bake sale is being planned for August. Chairman Cathleen Connell has told me that you've all been so great, we can't do without you and/or your used, valuable discards. Please bring them to us Monday-Saturday between 12 and 7 p.m.

Look out. Next week you will see printed right here: new CYC menu; progress report on city-CYC joint effort; low-key summer programs and activities; and part-time staff.

Summer cleaning

WELL, INTREPID readers, here's the old good news and bad news syndrome.

First, the good news. I made a monumental move in the direction of organization last weekend and cleaned off my desk (those who have seen my desk will know what a task that is). It's amazing what I found, so take heart if your press release hasn't shown up yet. It might make it still. Some things, of course, I simply have received too late to get in.

First, there will be news garnered around town.

• Robert and Royal Adams antique, gift and gourmet coffee shop, Adams Pot Belly Stove on Fifth Avenue between Mission Street and Junipero Avenue is in escrow to Mary Giammanco.

The Adamses experienced some difficulty, shall we say, when William Jenkins was purchasing the shop in May and went before the Business License and Code Review Board and the deal fell through. Whether it was the licensing board's fault or not is unknown at this point, but Royal Adams was not very amused. Particularly since the Adamses had sold their Carmel Valley ranch and had to move by the end of June. So Royal threatened to sue the city.

But, hopefully, this escrow should take care of things, but I haven't been able to get a hold of the Adamses so I'm not sure where it stands with them at the moment.

• Paul Laub has called to say he is putting in a shop called Carmel Chocolate Factory in the former PhotoArt photo processing location in the Paradise Building (corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street). Yep, Laub will make "thigh killers" right there in full view of the street. Of course, the idea must get the approval of the city.

Laub first called and said he had someone else who was going to put in the shop, but called back and said he is going to do it. Who knows?

The mezzanine upstairs is going to be taken over by a shop called Carmel Cotton & Fleece soon. A business license has been filed with the city, but the shop's not in there yet. At least it wasn't the last time I looked.

And what will happen to that fine addition to Carmel's quaint shops, Clintville, which now occupies that space? It will be moved downstairs, Laub said.

• Ron Widel has opened his own carpenter workshop on Junipero between Third and Fourth avenues. He said he won't be doing anything different than he has for the past 30 years as an independent carpenter around the peninsula but it was "time he paid his dues."

Widel explained he is more than happy to do anything a carpenter can do and he really likes fine woodworking — that's the more refined finish work in construction.

USED BOOKS IN THE VILLAGE

As a book lover — never can resist a book store — I was happy to hear that owner Thomas Strickland is about to open Books & Things in Carmel Valley Village at 20 E. Carmel Valley Rd.

The shop will be a paperback "used books exchange" much like the one he owned and operated for three years in Salinas.

Strickland said the shop will have all kinds of reading, from fiction to non-fiction and "everything from romance, westerns, science fiction, horror novels, mysteries, gothic mysteries and children's books." In fact, he said he has about 50,000 books already.

If it's a used book, I guess he's interested.

People "can bring their paperbacks in and I will give them one-fourth the retail price — subject to the condition of the book," he said.

He will sell the books for one-half retail plus tax.

"They can bring them back and exchange them again," he added.

There'll be no magazines, posters or comic books. Too much of a hassle; it's a specialized field anyway, Strickland said.

However, he will also sell some gift items — that's the "Things" section, I suppose — and other goodies. But where he'll find room with that many books, I don't know.

Strickland said he reads about five books a week and "anything with print on it" so he I guess he knows his books. But has he read all 50,000?

CARMEL POLICE REPORT BY OFFICER GREG LINDSEY

Seniors Helping Seniors

Most of us who live on the Monterey Peninsula, and in Carmel-by-the-Sea in particular, regard ourselves as fortunate people. We are able to live in an area known around the world for its scenic beauty and cultural heritage. We see images on television of the poor and destitute and read stories about starvation and suffering elsewhere in the world. Most of us are touched by these images and wish we could do something to help, even if only in a small way. We tend to think of these misfortunes as things that happen to other people in other places, few of us being really aware of what is happening in our own back yards.

In every group in our society there are those individuals who "slip through the cracks." People who are seldom seen or thought of, people who have made their contributions to our community, but have now, somehow, been forgotten.

Carmel-by-the-Sea has about 5,000 residents at present. Many of these citizens are elderly and live alone. Many have no close friends or relatives. Many have no one but themselves. These are the people who slip through the cracks. During the past five years, the Carmel Police Department has investigated more than 30 unattended deaths. The average age of these victims was 71 years. Many of these people died and remained undiscovered for days or even weeks due to the absence of regular contact with friends or family. The police department routinely receives calls for assistance from elderly persons who have fallen in their homes and are unable to assist themselves. Some of these individuals live alone; others have spouses living with them, but they too are unable to help due to their age, their physical condition, or other factors.

Over the past 17 years, crime prevention and security programs have been well established in both large and small communities across the country. A 1980 survey conducted among law enforcement agencies in 27 states showed that 90 percent were in strong agreement that citizen interest in home security and crime prevention would increase over the next decade. With the rising problem of personnel cutbacks posed by budget restrictions, a serious question had to be addressed: "How would police departments confront the rising interest and demand for crime prevention and security programs?"

The obvious answer was to recruit volunteers as an alternative to budget restrictions and personnel shortages.

Volunteer citizens have shown a special interest in working with law enforcement agencies.

They are particularly interested in crime prevention and security programs because: 1. they are members of the community; 2. they see themselves as potential victims; and 3. they are committed to helping better their communities.

Volunteer programs have a number of positive benefits for both the community and its law enforcement agency. These include promoting a closer relationship between citizens and the police; encouraging citizens to feel more responsible in the working of their city government; developing self-esteem in the volunteer; and utilizing valuable experience and knowledge of senior citizens who are retired in the community.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department is presently implementing a "Seniors Helping Seniors" program. The principal goals and objectives of this senior citizen volunteer program would be:

1. To provide a better quality of security and welfare checks for shut-ins or "at risk" seniors.

2. To promote community awareness of the senior volunteer program as an important part of established crime prevention and home security programs.

3. To provide senior citizens with the opportunity to participate actively in a worthwhile community service.

4. To help the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department improve service to the community without added cost to the taxpayers.

In essence, the program will consist of volunteers making daily telephone contact with elderly residents who fall into the "at risk" group. All equipment and materials will be provided by the police department.

If you are a senior citizen in the community and would like to volunteer to participate in this program by donating a few hours of your time, we urge you to contact the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403. Help us in our efforts to reach out to those who need to know that someone cares.

Financial Analysis and Planning for Bank of America's Money and Loan Policy Committee, the position she held until now.

Prior to joining the bank, Proctor worked as a financial consultant for the United Nations, and as a traffic manager for AT&T.

Originally from Grand Rapids, Mich., Proctor is a graduate of the University of Michigan, where she earned a bachelor's degree in economics and a master's in business administration in finance.

She and her husband John plan to live on the Monterey Peninsula.

REGENCY ANTIQUES OPENS

Maureen Morford and her daughter, Jennifer, were about to open Regency Antiques in Carmel last year, but ended up at Carmel Rancho Lane on the corner where the lane meets The Barnyard parking lot.

Originally I printed that she would open at J. R. Stephan's space on Mission Street in the Court of the Fountains. Things didn't work out, and now that space stands empty. But Morford has found a home at the Mouth of the Valley for her antiques.

Morford has opened in the space that Harrington Interiors had occupied. She shares her shop with interior designer Barbara Harrington.

Her mother owned an antique store in Seattle, Wash., according to Jennifer, and she, herself, worked for a museum in British Columbia, Canada. Jennifer said she worked as a display designer there, particularly for the Victorian era displays. Her mother has taken courses at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, she added.

The shop offers a "variety of things," Jennifer said, from as early as the 17th Century. Right now the premier piece is a "boat" or "sleigh" bed from the Empire era.

"We try to have things that are indicative of the era," Jennifer said.

Maureen Morford said that shop also has miniatures and small carry-out type of items.

Though the Carmel shop was planned as an interior design center, Morford said in the new location they'll work in conjunction with Barbara Harrington as the interior designer.

CARMEL VOICE

BY SAM SALERNO

Whack and chase

The Mt. Diablo Hills Monterey Scramble Golf Tournament held last weekend at Rancho Canada and Carmel Valley Country Club is really growing . . . this year's group was 60 strong and the proceeds benefit the American Cancer Society and Hospice. The majority of the players are from Walnut Creek, Pleasanton, and Danville with a few locals thrown in. Last year, $1,000 was donated according to Eric Fenchel, who puts it all together. Dr. Brad Carl's group won first prize with a low score of 12 under par for the two rounds. Another local, Jose Laffeyette, played in his group.

HERE AND THERE

Met Peter Savale, the new owner of Sade's, and he tells me he has many changes planned with the main thought of trying to bring back an ambience which will make it the most popular spot in town, as it was years ago a la Joel Thomas. Hope so, Pete . . . hasn't been the same for a long time.

Tired tongues is the best way to describe The Great Carmel Lick-In last Saturday at Devendorf Park. Free ice cream (donated by community-minded Frank Enea of Dreyers) was handed out and T-shirts were sold to raise funds to purchase smoke alarms for those unable to buy them. Greg Cellitti should receive a pat on the back for his benevolent efforts in making The Lick-In a success. Make mine strawberry!

KUDOS FOR THE TEACHER

Recently KBOQ, the peninsula's classical music station, joined the nation in recognizing Mrs. Alicia Villanueva as the Phoebe Apperson Hearst National Educator of the year, an award by the National Parent-Teacher Association (P.T.A.). Mrs. Villanueva, who teaches English as a second language at Washington Junior High School in Salinas, enjoys Pavarotti (This gal has good taste). Throughout their broadcast day, KBOQ saluted Mrs. Villanueva and all educators who have concluded another successful school year.

THEY NEVER STOP LEARNING

John and Dorothy Beech, of Beeches Gallery, visited an Impressionist Show in San Francisco recently, a show which will last through July. John says, "The show was tremendous!" When he visited the side rooms, much to his delight, he found portraits of Early Americans . . . George Washington and Ben Franklin, to name just two. He said the response to the show was phenomenal and suggests if you take it in, morning time is preferable to avoid the crowds.

ANOTHER CHARITY

Tom Ryan, chairman of the San Jose Hospital Foundation, writes to tell me that the Konica LPGA San Jose Cal Classic will be back in September at the Almaden Golf and Country Club. San Jose Hospital Foundation is one of the participating charities. You can donate to charity by getting your tickets early. Call 408 977-4660

CONDOLENCES

Go out to Wayne Smith at the loss of his mom in Fresno last week. Wayne is bar manager at Rancho Canada. Our thoughts go out also to the friends and fans of College basketball Len Bias, who died of a sudden heart attack. The big question is, why must all these superstars who have the world by the tail seek drugs for their ultimate high when they are on a "natural high?" It's a crime and a great loss to see all these talented people end it all with drugs. There's a better solution. Stay high by eating right and exercising!

We did a double take when we saw Alan Schultz, co-owner of KRML Radio. He was our station rep 21 years ago when he worked for Savalli/Gates out of San Francisco. At that time our broadcasting scenario took place in Las Vegas, Nev. Small world, eh? Alan's partner is Gil Wisdom.

A REAL SCOTCHMAN

Ed Muscari, former graphics chief at KMST and now with the Shopper, tells a tale of the great Tommy Armour in the early days at Medinah Country Club near Chicago. Seems no one wanted to caddy for him because he was "tight as a drum." Ed said, "The honor caddies" (and he was one of them) "were paid $1.75 for 18 holes and the 'B' caddies received about 75 cents. When Armour showed up, we all ran the other way." Ed relates that he would take on members with only a putter for 18 holes and beat them. Yes, a true Scotsman!

There is no charge for you to lend an ear each Saturday night at 6 o'clock when we spin two hours of your favorite light jazz selections on KRML. That's 1410 on your radio smile. Catch it, it's habit-forming.

Till the next time.

San Clemente dam workshop

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District will conduct a workshop July 2 on preliminary project design and cost estimate of the proposed San Clemente Dam.

The workshop is set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 2 in the Seaside City Library Conference Room. The public is encouraged to attend.

The workshop concerns the revised draft project design and cost estimates of the dam. Ken King of Converse Consultants will discuss what the dam will look like, its dimensions, how it will be built, inundation area, fish passage facilities, potential for hydroelectric power and construction costs.

The workshop is the first in a series planned for Wednesday evenings. The next scheduled is July 23 and will address the cumulative impacts analysis and demand projections of the dam.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, in conjunction with the American Association of Retired Persons, has begun a new program using television to help older people maintain a healthier lifestyle. Many seniors lack proper information on how to improve their health with sensible exercise, balanced diet and the proper use of drugs and medications. The TV spots run from 10 to 30 seconds, and cover one health tip each.

Senior citizens discounts on a wide range of products and services have been a great help to many people. But, don't automatically ask for the senior price when making a major purchase. Explore all the other options offered, because some may provide even better savings. With a number of airlines, for instance, "supersaver" fares can be lower than "senior" fares under certain circumstances. Take the time to shop carefully and you'll get the most for your money.

Remember When? May 6, 1935—The Works Progress Administration (WPA) was founded.

'Two-take Jas'

Film's title role is her first acting job

By NANCY HILLS

WHO IS Jasmin Lauren Reate and why did she shave her head in February?

Right now, Jasmin is a six-and-a-half-year-old Carmel Valley resident and Briarcliff Academy student, spending summer going to Diane Butler's Interest Builders dance day camp and to whom being interviewed is nowhere near as interesting as walking across the street to Thinker Toys.

But in December of this year, millions of people will undoubtedly know who Jasmin Reate is. That's when Paramount Pictures will release The Golden Child, starring comedian Eddie Murphy. Jasmin plays the title role — for which she had to shave off her long, black hair.

It's no walk-on part. Jasmin's father, interior designer Rudy Reate, said she is on the screen about 60 to 70 percent of the picture, though she only has one line — "I know" — because her part involves primarily gestures and facial expressions.

She plays the "holy child of Tibet" whose touch turns evil to good and who is kidnapped by "demons," Reate said. Murphy plays a social worker/detective who tries to rescue the child. There are plenty of special effects and magic in the film, according to Reate.

"It's an action adventure/comedy," he explained.

But wait. There's more than movie magic going on here. The Golden Child is a boy. Jasmin is most definitely a girl. No problem. Name her J. L. Reate for those not in line for chocolate-covered raisins and popcorn when the credits roll. With a six-and-a-half-year-old star that's all it takes, so Jasmin got the part after Paramount Pictures interviewed 800 children but could not find a male child who fit the bill.

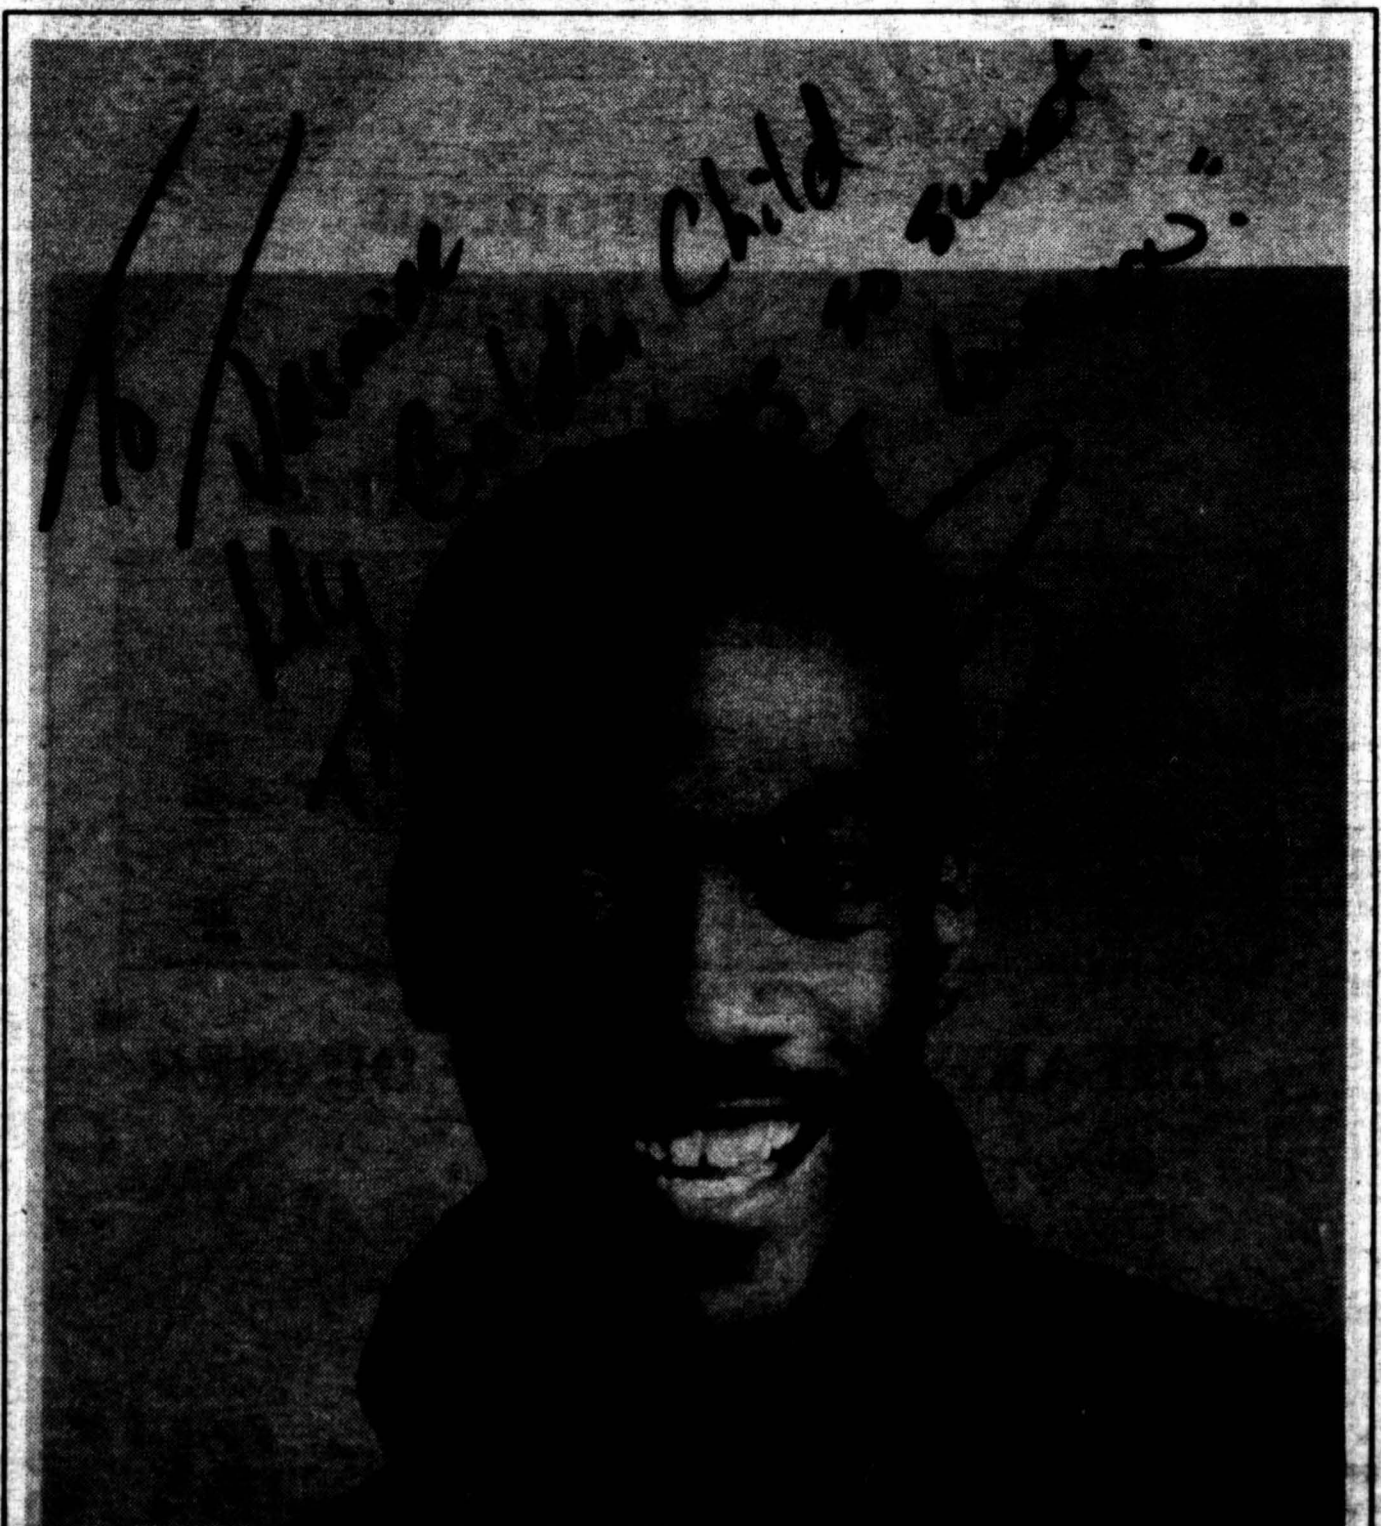

Playing a boy rather than a girl was "all right" she said and her cropped hair, now growing out, doesn't bother her.

But she said she isn't sure she would do it again. Squirming on her father's knee, Jasmin said, "It was boring. All that

TOGETHER DURING a break in filming are Rudy Reate, Jasmin Reate and Eddie Murphy. Jasmin's costume for her role as the Tibetan holy child was red silk with a golden dragon on the back.

EDDIE MURPHY is now Jasmin Reate's favorite star. The photograph reads: "To Jasmin, My Golden Child, Thanks for being so sweet, I love you, Eddie." Murphy bought her a bicycle and sang her songs during the filming of The Golden Child. After Jasmin got the title role, her father rented videos of Murphy's Beverly Hills Cop and Trading Places so Jasmin could see him.

A FUTURE STAR, Jasmin Reate will probably be better known to moviegoers in December as J. L. Reate. She has the title role in The Golden Child starring Eddie Murphy. The Briarcliff second-grader was tutored during the seven weeks of filming in Los Angeles. (Mac McDonald photo.)

waiting." What she did like were the breaks in shooting and playing in the studio.

Her father explained it was very much a hurry-up-and-wait situation while the crew set up for each scene. But, he added with a wink, after the movie was done and they received another call for a television commercial, Jasmin was ready to go.

And there were compensations for testing her patience. Murphy carried her around, sang her songs and best of all, according to Jasmin, bought her a bicycle imprinted with the word "Starlet" to ride around the set. He bought it for her, she said, because she had admired his bicycle.

When asked who her favorite star is, she has no hesitation when she answers, "Eddie Murphy!" with enthusiasm.

Nor did the waiting around get in the way of her doing her job. Her nickname on the set was "Two-take Jas" because she performed so well her scenes rarely had to be redone, Reate said, even though this was her very first acting part. Jasmin said she never even performed in a school play.

Paramount's discovery of Jasmin, though, was not exactly accidental.

Reate explained that he and his wife, Jasmin's mother Beverly Reate, a cosmetologist and part owner of Pastels hair salon in Carmel, had decided to start their daughter modeling about a year ago. They had tried the same thing with Jasmin's brothers, Jason, now 20, and Avery, 19, when they were young but neither was interested.

When Jasmin, however, was consulted, Reate said, she wanted to give it a try.

"We put her picture in a magazine because we were interested in her doing commercials," Reate explained.

The magazine was Faces International, a publication for talent agencies. Several called, he said, but the Reates decided to go with Cunningham, Escott and Dipene, an agency with offices in both New York and Los Angeles. The agency sent Jasmin out for numerous commercial interviews but she was never selected.

However, she was scheduled to interview for the part of a Tibetan holy child in December 1985 with 800 other children.

It was eight weeks before she was called back, along with 32 others. Then by the end of January, the selection was down to Jasmin and one other child, a boy.

When the studio talked to her mother, Reate said, and told her they were thinking of casting Jasmin, they added there were "two considerations."

"One, it was a boy's part and two, she has to shave her head," he said.

He and Beverly discussed it between themselves and with Jasmin.

"We didn't want to jump right into it because the welfare of our child was the most important thing," he explained.

Jasmin was a little hesitant, he said, to cut off her hair.

"I said, 'Jasmin, if I shave my head too, would that make you feel more comfortable?' " Reate recalled. "She wanted to do it and I wanted to have the experience of doing something like that, but cutting her hair was the only thing that she was worried about. So if she had someone do it with her and it was her father, she would feel better about it."

She agreed to that and the part was on.

The director, Michael Ritchie (Fletch, Wildcats) later told Reate that Jasmin just "out-smiled them all." Reate also found out Ritchie had told the casting director, Patricia Mock, that when they interviewed the 33 finalists, she stood out "like a jewel."

ARTS & LEISURE

DURING THE filming of The Golden Child six-and-a-half-year-old Jasmin Reate performed many of her own stunts, said her father Rudy Reate. Here, Eddie Murphy, the film's leading man, pulls her from a car during a chase scene.

With the role came the haircut, so both heads were shaved — an operation which hurt a "little," she said. The studio made Jasmin a $2,000 wig to cover her shaved head.

"She's only worn it once," Reate laughed.

Filming began Feb. 12 and Jasmin and her father temporarily moved to Los Angeles to live with her mother's cousin. Every time she was on the set, he was there. Mom would visit during the weekends.

"I think that's one of the reasons she did so well," Reate said. "She had a stable home environment around her during the entire time."

Things got off to a rocky start, however. In Jasmin's very first scene, a plastic foam floor was blown up behind her. Though it had been explained to Jasmin beforehand, it

Virginia playwright wins Carmel Festival of Firsts prize

AN ADAPTATION of Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities garnered Joellen Bland the $2,000 prize as winner of the ninth annual Festival of Firsts Playwriting Competition.

If funding is approved by the festival sponsor, the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea, A Tale of Two Cities will be staged at Sunset Theater in the fall.

Harriet Shanner, one of three judges for the festival, cited "very rich ideas in comparison to so many of the other plays" as reason for their choice of an adaptation. Some 194 works were submitted this year. Judging responsibilities were shared by Shanner, James Kinney and Richard Vreeland.

"She somehow surrounded that big novel," Kinney observed. "You have to visualize the play while you read it. This is the only adaptation that has won the prize."

"My love for Dickens' work keeps me at my typewriter," Bland conveyed via press release. "I won the 1984 Shenandoah Valley Playwrights Retreat Competition with an adaptation of Nicholas Nickleby and I have done several short versions of other Dickens' works for Plays, Inc. in Boston and Contemporary Drama Service. I simply cannot resist the wealth of dramatic possibilities in Dickens."

The prizewinner makes her home in Lexington, Va., and serves as editorial assistant with the George C. Marshall Research Foundation. She is also director of the VMI Theatre at the Virginia Military Institute in Lexington.

Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler noted that, to his knowledge, Carmel remains the only community in the United States that presents a cash award to promising playwrights.

Carmel-by-the-Sea then becomes a premiere site for the winning play.

"We try to keep ticket prices down to get as many people in to see the production as possible," Tyler added. "It's really a complete giving by the city."

If the Festival of Firsts obtains sufficient funding, Bland's adaptation of A Tale of Two Cities will have its first staging Sept. 19-21. Proposed director is Jim Mairs, founder of the Magic Carpet children's theater.

"A Tale of Two Cities is a melodramatic tragedy written in story theater style," Mairs stated. "It's a style I'm familiar with. I don't believe in doing Dickens as a museum piece."

Mairs described Bland's play as "an actor's tour de force," noting that its 45 characters are portrayed by nine men and four women.

Harriet Shanner affirmed the judges' challenge in weeding through nearly 200 submissions to select the elusive literary plum.

"You read five bad plays consecutively and then you read one that's different — so you think it's better than it really is," she said. "One man has been in the finals for three years. We've spent more time reading that play. He reworks it, and we send him suggestions, but he reworks the wrong parts."

The judges said they often send constructive suggestions to the playwrights who submit works to Carmel from around the United States.

"A couple of years ago I was in Seattle — a pretty good theater town," Kinney said. "People there mentioned the Carmel Festival of Firsts. It's one of those places unpublished playwrights can be heard. And you know, good plays are being written."

JOELLEN BLAND is the 1986 winner of the Festival of Firsts playwriting competition sponsored by the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Bland's entry is an adaptation of Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities.

'Madwoman of Chaillot' at Outdoor Forest

THE MADWOMAN OF CHAILLOT, written by French novelist and playwright Jean Giraudoux just after World War II, is enjoying a revival at Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater. This satirically incisive comedy, directed by Keith Decker with sets designed and painted by Carey Crockett, introduces us, at a Paris outdoor cafe, to a raffish assortment of street types facing off with the authors of their distress — the corporate moneymakers intent on stamping out individuality and garnering the big buck.

As such, you might think they play dated, but somehow, with Carmelites concerning themselves about the ramifications of ever more development and Pacific Grovians wondering whether a big movie theater will over-citify them, Giraudoux's lines have a certain freshness. The title character points out, for example, that "there are people in the world who want to destroy everything ... They pretend to be building only to destroy." No matter which side you're on, it's an interesting line. And Madwoman is chockfull of them. For Countess Aurelia (Betty Fowlston), the madwoman of Chaillot, is firmly in charge of the confrontation between corporate opportunists and their hapless victims, and a worthy warrior she is, bringing the quirky wisdom and fluid time sense of great age to bear on no lesser an issue than "the fate of mankind."

If you are looking for realism, you won't find it in this play, for Giraudoux's principal gift is to make social commentary not only enjoyable, but to wrap it in whimsy so fantastic that the truth sneaks and bites you on the elbow while you are busily engaged in admiring the view. Thus in the middle of a cockeyed court scene, led up to by the drollery of three old ladies unmasking each other's little madnesses, a ragpicker delivers a scathing denunciation of corporate greed the power of which is heightened by the nonsense that surrounds it.

Unfortunately, this revival of a very good play suffers in the first act from uneven performances in many of the minor roles and a lagging pace that makes us wait too long for the much more effective action of Act II. James Brady's President rushes his lines; Steve Harris's Baron is hardly a presence; and Chuck Scardina's Prospector is sometimes badly overplayed.

With the entrance of Fowlston, the action heats up. Fowlston's madwoman is elegant, witty, and elegiac, turning in a masterful performance that makes old age glorious. In Act II, the madwomen's tea party repays us for our patience with sparkling performance by Gertrude Chapell as a petulant Constance with an invisible pooch, Florence Mason as a coquettish Gabrielle with equally invisible friends, and Doris

Pensive ragpicker

KEITH-DECKER is a philosophical ragpicker in The Madwoman of Chaillot, continuing at the Outdoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel.

Silver as Josephine, a smart lady with an improvisational eye for justice.

Throughout, Dana Kirk is a winsome presence as Irma, cafe waitress and handmaiden to Aurelia, and Keith Decker's Ragpicker is strong, clear, and colorful. Carey Crockett's impressionistic sets are charming, and Denise Clifford's costumes complement them nicely. But this production of The Madwoman of Chaillot, especially in the first half, does not do justice to Giraudoux's lively, witty script.

THEATER REVIEW

BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

'Chorus Line' at Western Stage

A CHORUS should dance and sing and move as one, for it is a backdrop for a main event, providing movement, sound and color but never distracting the audience's attention from the star. The enduring musical Chorus Line (book by James Kirkwood and Nicholas Dante, music by Marvin Hamlisch and lyrics by Edward Kleban) inverts this basic logic, making the chorus line itself — and the individuals who comprise it — the subject matter of the play.

The current Western Stage production, directed by Roxanne M. Captor with choreography by Lorenzo Aragon and musical direction by Stephen Tosh, is billed as a workshopped show, taking off on the original method by which chorus line was developed in 1973. What this means to the theater goer is that visuals and the choreography of the current production do not vaguely resemble the Broadway version.

A great deal of the time, this production works. The chorus is well rehearsed, the action is well paced, and Chorus Line is a good looking show, with costume designer Sue Stafford Milton artfully orchestrating color and type in the dancers' practice clothes to give the rehearsal stage setting a coherent look. Alex Hutton's set is likewise good looking and functional, with multiple levels and a wonderfully flashy finale staircase.

But Chorus Line has its ups and downs, especially dancewise. The script calls for Cassie (Wendy Lade), a character who has outgrown the chorus line but who desperately wants to get back in, to make the show's central point. "A dancer dances," Cassie says, and follows up with a lengthy solo number ("Give Me a Job") that is emphasized with a mirrored backdrop, a big musical treatment, and a lengthy solo dance. Although Lade's voice is fine and she looks good in the role, the dance moves she is given are pedestrian. The orchestra strives, to no avail, to compensate with volume. This number fails to convey the raison d'être of a dancer's life and the weakness of its choreography is especially disappointing considering the expectations created by its buildup. The handling of this pivotal number is Chorus Line's biggest fault.

Otherwise, Chorus Line, is in pretty good shape. "One Singular Sensation" is one of several numbers that work on every level — it is interestingly choreographed, well rehearsed and strongly performed. Chorus Line examines the varied paths and private motivations of 20 dancers in desperate competition for eight jobs ("four girls, four boys"). The group therapy atmosphere of the plot is created by Zeph

American Buffalo

American Buffalo, David Mamet's social drama about post-Vietnam, post-Watergate America, concludes its run in the Monterey Peninsula College SRO Theatre. Directed by Conrad Selvig, the play depicts a society plagued by decay, violence, fear and anxiety. American Buffalo won the New York Drama Critics' Award.

Praised by some critics for the skill with which he portrayed American lowlife, largely through the language of the streets, Mamet was attacked by others for much the same reason. Because of its strong language, the play may not be suitable for all audiences, and parental discretion is advised.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, June 27-28. The theater is at 980 Fremont Blvd., Monterey. Tickets are $4. For reservations, call the box office from 4 to 8 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays at 646-4213.

Pump Boys and Dinettes

A country, gospel and rockabilly revue plays The Western Stage with the arrival of Pump Boys and Dinettes. This collaboratively written piece is part theater and part musical concert. It is set on Highway 58 somewhere between Frog Level and Smirna, in the vicinity of the Double Cupp Diner run by Prudie and Rhetta Cupp.

The show continues at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, June 27-28. Tickets are $8.50 Fridays and Saturdays, $7.50 Sundays through Thursdays and matinees. The Western Stage is headquartered at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Reservations: 375-2111 or 758-1221.

Talking With, a collection of 11 monologues that won the 1982 American Theater Critics Award for best regional play, opens the GroveMont Theater Arts Center Festival of Women's Plays.

Final performances of Talking With will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, June 26-28, at the theater, 320 Hoffman St. in Monterey. Thursday tickets are $6.50 general, $5 for students and senior citizens. Friday and Saturday tickets are $7.50 general, $6 for students and senior citizens. Reservations: 649-6852.

(Wayne C. Watkins) who auditions them, not merely for their dancing skills but on the merits of their personal stories. Chorus Line's extensive popularity is probably due as much to the coldblooded mind games this character plays with the dancers as it is to the song and dance routines. The neutral offstage voice, requiring people who do not know each other to reveal their innermost secrets under duress, creates a psychological meat parade, a subtle game of intimidation in which the chorus must undress their psyches without knowing why.

Among the show's 22 performers, there are no clumsy performances and many fine ones. A few of these are Art Anderson as Mike, whose lightness and timing ("I Can Do That") set the standard for the show, Elizabeth Faulkner as Sheila, an aging (almost 30) dancer struggling not to show her bitterness, Ann Patricia as Diana, who does justice to "What I Did For Love," one of Chorus Line's standout numbers, and Wendy Herrick and Joe De Cenzo, who are very funny as a married couple auditioning together.

Despite occasional weaknesses in the choreography, Chorus Line is well produced, fast paced entertainment.

Fledgling film actress claims title role in new adventure comedy startled and frightened her, Reate said, and dust blew into her eyes.

But after about a half-hour of talking to her, she was ready to go again, he added.

There were two rules Jasmin said she followed while filming.

"Don't look into the camera and always listen to the director."

The first rule, not to look into the camera, proved the most difficult.

"It was hard not to," she said.

One of her favorite memories is of going to George Lucas' special effects company, Industrial Light and Magic, in San Rafael.

There she "got to see little bitty models of demons" and she "meditated" in front of a "blue screen," a type of screen used when special effects are to be added later.

She also has happy memories of playing with Emanuel Lewis — who plays Webster on television — who's 15 "and shorter than I am," she said.

Jasmin did some of her own stunts, Reate said, including being carried during a chase scene. There were a few staged fight scenes but they didn't frighten her, she maintained.

She particularly liked a battle between the good guys and bad guys while she's locked in a hanging iron cage by the kidnappers.

"I loved the fight scenes. I got to ride in my cage and it would swing back and forth," she said. She did admit that sometimes "It was kind of scary."

Not everything in the film was fighting and action, however. In one scene, the Golden Child brings a bird "back to life" — a live Australian Golden Roselle that the studio gave to Jasmin once the picture was finished.

Her father was with her every day on the set and she would look to him for comfort and guidance, but he attributes much of her lack of fear to her three years of training in gymnastics.

"I think it built up her confidence," he said.

After the film was finished on schedule, Reate said one of the most frequent comments from people involved was "how mature Jasmin is for a 6-year-old."

Ritchie, he added, said he would give Jasmin a recommendation any time.

Her father isn't worried about her getting spoiled.

"She's got a good attitude. She never had to be disciplined while on the set and everyone treated her very well."

There was also a social worker on the set during the shooting, as required by law for minors.

He is still unsure of exactly how to handle the attention she will surely get once the film is released.

"I've never gone through that before," he admitted.

"I think Jasmin is just a well-balanced kid. That's probably because she has love and affection from the both of us (her parents) evenly," Reate observed.

As for Jasmin, she just said, "I don't feel any different."

JASMIN REATE and her father, Rudy Reate, show off their matching haircuts. Jasmin had to shave her head for her title role in Paramount Pictures' The Golden Child so

Rudy Reate shaved his to keep her company. Reate said he put most of Jasmin's salary from the picture in a trust fund for her college education. (Nancy Hills photo.)

Ticket run is on at MPC Theater

Season tickets are now on sale for the Monterey Peninsula College 1986-87 theater season.

The upcoming season features three comedies, two musicals and a drama, beginning with Cole Porter's Anything Goes, which runs July 10-26. Directed by Peter Nyberg, the show casts a female evangelist, a Wall Street yuppie, a lame-brained baronet, a gangster, and "the girl next door" in romantic interludes aboard a ship bound for England.

Nyberg, who last directed at MPC in 1984 when he staged A Flea in Her Ear, is founder of the California Actors' Theatre in Palo Alto and has more than 20 years' theater experience. A Shakespearean actor and director of state-wide renown, Nyberg has also acted in many television shows and is author of several screenplays.

The MPC Players will close out the summer with Charley's Aunt, a farcical portrayal of courtship involving two love-struck couples. The show opens Aug. 14 and plays through Aug. 30. Returning to MPC from the College of Marin to direct is James Dunn, known on the peninsula for his inventive directing of such shows as Comedy of Errors and, most recently, for his artful rendition of the sell-out musical hit Guys and Dolls.

On Golden Pond, a sentimental comedy about an elderly couple facing their twilight years, opens Oct. 9 and plays through Oct. 25. Lighter in tone and treatment than the film version which starred Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn, the play will be directed by MPC Drama Instructor Conrad Selvig, whose recent directing credits include American Buffalo and Revenge of the Space Pandas.

Eugene O'Neill's classic American tour de force, Long Day's Journey Into Night, will close out the MPC 1986-87 season, with performances slated for three weekends beginning May 21. Set in the living room of a summer house in 1912, the play renders in painful detail the tortured family relationships of a miserly father, a drug-addicted mother, and two sons — one an alcoholic and the other tubercular.

Reviewing an early production of the play for the New York Times, critic Brooks Atkinson wrote: "It restores the drama to literature and the theatre to art." New York Herald Tribune critic Walter Kerr called it "...a stunning theatrical experience." Richard Watts, writing for the New York Post, described it as "...a magnificent and shattering play."

Those interested in guaranteeing their reservations for these six main stage productions are urged to act on the season ticket offer as soon as possible. Season tickets may be purchased directly through the MPC Community Services Office, through Center Stage Ticketing (above the Viennese Bakery in downtown Monterey) or by writing to the MPC Drama Department (Attn: Andrew Craig).

For a family, a season ticket (good for six main stage shows) costs $15 for the first individual, $10 for the second, and $5 for the third through sixth tickets. Arithmetically, that figures out to $1.25 per person, per show, as compared with $8 for general admission ($10 for musicals) for non-season ticket holders.

After July 11, the deal will still be good, but not quite as good because the above season ticket prices will be raised to $21, $14 and $7 respectively.

"Probably the best deal in San Francisco."

Mack, principal oboe of the Cleveland Orchestra, is noted for his ability to make the oboe the most distinctive of solo instruments. He has chosen Mozart's Concerto in C Major, K.314 as the major work in his recital program. Mack will also perform Czech composer Peter Eben's Oboe Sonata, Sonatine by Darius Milhaud, Obsession by Shinohara of Japan and Grande Sole de Concerte, No. 4 in F Major by the 19th century French composer Verroust.

Mack will be joined by pianist Marc Shapiro who accompanied him in a recent European tour. Shapiro, who has a reputation for standing shoulder to shoulder with his soloist, was also chosen for last year's Masters Festival to accompany horn virtuoso Philip Myers of the New York Philharmonic.

Lisa Emenheiser will offer Franz Schubert's Sonata in A Major, Opus 120, Ballade in A Flat Major, Opus 47 by Chopin and Fantastic Pieces by Robert Schumann.

Emenheiser has appeared as guest soloist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, the Richmond Symphony Orchestra, the United States Marine Band and the Chautauqua Festival Orchestra. This is her third solo recital at Hidden Valley. She also performs with Julius Baker in recital there and accompanies participants in Baker's two Hidden Valley flute master classes.

Tickets are $10 for each recital. They may be obtained from the Hidden Valley Box Office, 659-3115, and the following outlets: Countrywide Crafts, The Barnyard and How To Do Anything Bookstore, Lobos Court, Carmel; Abinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado, Monterey; Prim and Proper, 533 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove.

Crisis center will begin training volunteers

The Community Counseling Center will be offering a weekend seminar on counseling and crisis intervention skills for people interested in volunteering on the center's 24-hour crisis line.

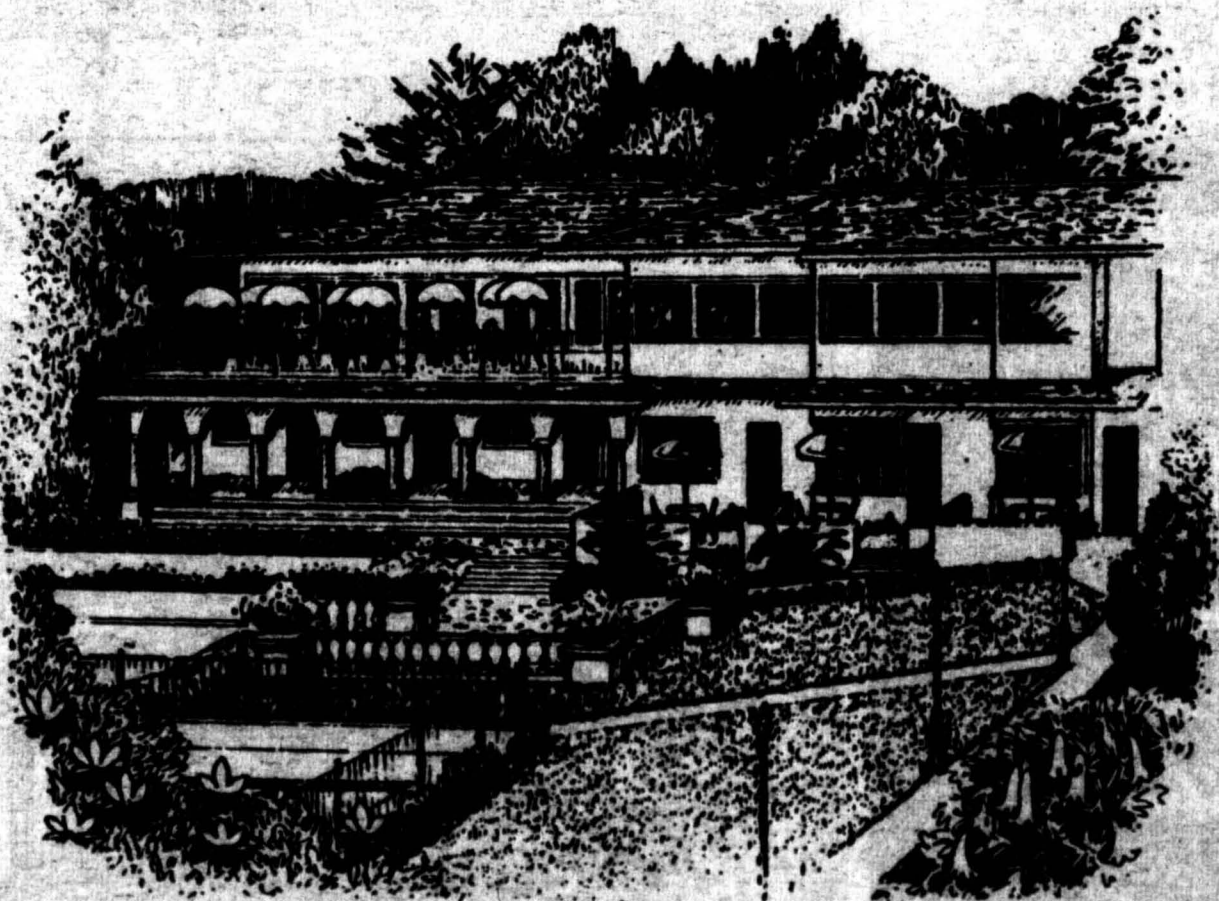

The training will be held 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 19 and 20 at the Counseling Center, 590 Pearl St. in Monterey. For details, call Helen DiLorenzo at the Community Counseling Center.

In addition, volunteers provide information and referrals to clientele about community services. Education and training are ongoing learning opportunities for the volunteer counselors.

The Community Counseling Center provides counseling and crisis intervention services to youth and families on the Monterey Peninsula. These include individual and family counseling, runaway services, parent education groups, a schools program and community outreach. Headliners perform at Monterey blues festival

FORGET LASER light shows, dry ice fog and flashy pyrotechnics, the Monterey Bay Blues Festival will offer concertgoers not only no-frills food for the soul by the likes of Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, Bobby "Blue" Bland, Taj Mahal, and Millie Jackson, but soul food as well, from hot links and collard greens to sweet potato pie.

The Monterey County Fairgrounds will be jumping to the sounds of blues and boogie Saturday, June 28, for two shows, an afternoon show featuring "Gatemouth" and Bobby "Blue" at 1 p.m. and an evening show with Taj and Millie, "The Queen of Sass with Class," at 7 p.m.

In addition to the action on the Pattee Arena stage, there will be a heavy dose of the blues throughout the day on the outside stages, featuring several prominent Bay Area blues artists, including Little Frankie Lee and guitarist Bobby Murray, who has played extensively with blues great B.B. King.

Complementing the down-home music will be some down-home cooking with all the makings of a Mississippi River delta fish fry or a rib joint on the South Side of Chicago: barbecued ribs and chicken, hot links, Louisiana catfish, collard greens, black-eyed peas, corn on the cob, sweet potato pie and peach cobbler.

But the blues wasn't built on Kool-Aid, so there will be several booths selling cold beer, wine and other alcoholic (as well as non-alcoholic) beverages to go with your soul food. Leave your coolers at home, however; state law prohibits the use of cans or bottles on state grounds, so no coolers, or food or beverage containers will be allowed in the fairgrounds.

Kicking off the 1 o'clock afternoon show — it might be wise to bring a hat and sunglasses, there's very little shade unless you're in the side boxes — will be the rockin' Texas blues and swing of the Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown Review. Brown is an accomplished singer, guitarist, fiddler and harmonica player with an eclectic repertoire; he even recorded an album with country guitarist Roy Clark.

Louisiana-born and Texas-bred, Brown infuses his particular brand of music with boogie woogie, Texas swing, country, Cajun, straight-ahead boogie blues, even some jazz. He won a Grammy Award in 1984 for Blues Artist of the Year.

A strong man dispensing strong medicine, Bobby "Blue" Bland has become the consummate rhythm and blues stylist in his 40-plus years in the business. He's the master of the soulful, brooding ballad, but can shout, growl and cry out the blues with the best of them. Even on his upbeat hit, Turn on Your Lovelight, there are a few tears behind the smile.

He's often been compared to the great Sam Cooke for his ability to combine pop music elements with raw blues.

The 7 o'clock evening show opens with multi-instrumentalist and singer Taj Mahal, who along with Ry Cooder, are the primary exponents and performers of pure American roots music: blues, folk, gospel, R&B, and jazz. Equally at home on the piano, guitar, bass, harmonica, vibes, mandolin, dulcimer, and kalimba, Mahal manages to bridge the distance between audience and performer with his laid-back manner and heartfelt interpretation of the music.

"Mellow" and "laid-back," however, aren't words you'd use to describe Millie Jackson, the feature act of the evening show.

Famous for her "rap monologues," ("bulletins on the war between sexes"), Jackson weaves her outrageous wit and raunchy asides into a rollicking tapestry of funk, soul, blues, rock 'n roll and even country.

Seating in the main arena is reserved, concert-style, with a choice of seating. Tickets for the first one-third of the arena, including side boxes, are $12 for each show; middle third, $10; and back third, $8. Seating capacity is approximately 7,000.

Tickets are available at the fairgrounds box office on Fairgrounds Road in Monterey today (Thursday) and Friday, from noon to 6 p.m. and all day Saturday starting at 9 a.m.

Tickets are also available in advance at all Ticketron and Bass ticket outlets. For more information contact the festival office at 394-2652.

Evening shows — the main arena is open-air — can get a little cool so it's suggested you bring something warm to wear and a cushion to sit on.

"I'VE ALWAYS BELIEVED that all you need to do is let other people hear the music inside you," explains Taj Mahal. The bluesman and multi-talented musician is a headliner at the Monterey Bay Blues Festival, returning Saturday, June 28.

Forestry experts offer safe camping advice

During the summer the California Department of Forestry and the United States Forest Service remind campers and recreationists to keep in mind the few tips that insure safe outings.

Preplan your outing. Consider the type of recreation you will be involved in. Compare it to your physical condition.

Leave explicit instructions where you will be and the date of return with someone. Check whether permits are needed for entry or for campfires prior to leaving on the trip. If open campfires are necessary and allowed by permit or permission, pick a safe location.

Tall brush and tree limbs are hazardous. Clean all flammable vegetation away from the fire site for a minimum of 10 feet. Make a shallow depression and surround it with rocks. A small hot fire conserves fuel and is better for cooking.

Never leave the fire unattended. Keep water and a shovel nearby and available should the unexpected happen. Extinguish campfires by pouring small amounts of water and stirring with a shovel.

When you are certain the fire is out feel the ashes with your bare hand carefully and make absolutely sure it's out. Do not leave the camp until the fire is dead out and cold. And leave the campsite clean for the next person.

English handbell concert presented tonight

THE CALVIN AND Chapel English Handbell Ringers of the First Presbyterian Church of Red Bank, New Jersey, will present a concert at Carmel Presbyterian Church at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 26.

The program will include original compositions for handbells as well as arrangements of classical and popular music. Admission to the concert is free.

The 20 ringers, all high school students, perform on two sets of English handbells, a total of 122 bells. Their performance is part of a two-week concert tour from San Francisco to San Diego, including a concert in the Crystal Cathedral, Garden Grove. They will also participate in a festival sponsored by the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers in Visalia. The Calvin Ringers have been invited to present the opening concert at the festival.

Gary Meredith, director of music and fine arts at the First Presbyterian Church of Red Bank, directs the Calvin Ringers, and Judith Werner, associate director, is director of the Chapel Ringers. The groups are two of eight handbell choirs in the church's music program, which also includes nine choral groups.

The Calvin and Chapel Ringers have established a national reputation, and perform in concert throughout the year. They presented a concert at the White House last Christmas, and were televised nationally when they rang for the Christmas tree lighting ceremony at Rockefeller Center in New York. Past tours have taken them to the Northeast, the Southeast and Canada.

Carmel Presbyterian Church is at Ocean and Junipero in Carmel.

BOBBIE ORLANDO, classical guitarist, will present works of Sor, Scarlatti, Lauro and others in concert Saturday, June 28 at All Saints Episcopal Church in Carmel.

Classical guitarist performs in Carmel

CLASSICAL GUITARIST Bobbie Orlando will perform in Carmel Saturday, June 28 at Parish Hall located on Lincoln Street between Ninth and 10th avenues.

Orlando holds a master's degree from the University of Southern California where she won a Guitar Departmental Award this year. In 1981 she took first place in the Norman Sholin Memorial Guitar Competition.

She will be performing several works on Saturday: Introduction and Variations on a Theme by Mozart, Op. 9 by Fernando Sor, Sonata in D Major (originally in E) L.23 K.380 by Domenico Scarlatti, and Variations and Fugue on a Theme of Handel by Albert Harris.

Artistic trio featured at Seaside City Hall Gallery

The art exhibit for the month of July at the Seaside Art Gallery will feature works by Dody Davis, Roland Wolke and William Abbott.

Dody Davis attended Fullerton College and also studied closely with Wanda Dengler and Juhn Shim. She moved to Buena Park after raising four sons. Having been a lost wax designer in the jewelry business for seven years, she retired due to an accident. In 1980 she decided to start painting in oils and has had a difficult time keeping up with her commissioned portraits.

Although she is capable of working in all media, she works with various subjects, her favorites being Indians and portraits. Her paintings hang in private collections in Alaska, Hawaii and throughout the United States. Davis has just been commissioned to paint the four living presidents for the Memorabilia Room at the White House.

Roland Wolke is a local glassblower. He received his education from Santa Barbara City College; San Jose State; Penland School of Arts and Crafts, Penland, N. C.; and Pilchuck Glass Center, Stanwood, Wash. He has current showings in San Francisco, Big Sur and Fort Ord. All his work is done singlehandedly and all the works are one-of-a-kind. According to the artist, spontaneous creativity plays a large role in this body of work.

Artist William Abbott, who will be exhibiting pottery, studied at the University of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyoming, and at San Jose City College. He is the former proprietor of Abbott's Art Farm of Centennial, Wyo., and a former pottery instructor at the Fort Ord Arts and Crafts Center.

He was born in London, England. While in the military, he served two tours in Vietnam, 1965-66 and 1968-69. Abbott enjoys working in clay, metal and stone, with special emphasis on raku firing.

The Seaside City Hall Art Gallery is located at 440 Harcourt Ave., Seaside, and the viewing hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, when City Hall is open. There is no admission charge.

For additional information, contact Timothy Sloan, art commission chairperson, 394-5490, or the city clerk's office, 899-6202.

The official opening of the show will be 7 p.m. on July 11 at Seaside City Hall.

Valpey works shown at foundation

"Art and Creation" are a way of life for Joyce Valpey. She can't imagine doing anything else.

"Each medium complements the other," she says, and enjoys working in oil, acrylic, watercolor and silk.

Having been part of a military family most of her life, she has experienced living and visiting the cultures of other lands. In Hawaii, her favorite, watercolor seemed to fit the spirit of the islands.

She prefers to do "feelings of subjects" rather than an exact rendition and sometimes begins with absolutely nothing in mind, leaving open the experiences of the past and present to blend together. She says "this doesn't always work but when it does the best, most creative works are produced."

Joyce has studied, taught and shown her work in Hawaii, Munich and Berlin and is now a resident of Salinas. Her last solo show was at the Marjorie Evans

Gallery at Carmel's Sunset Center in September 1985.

Valpey has taught "Wearable Art and Painting on Silk" through the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art's extended education program for the last three years.

Her works will be on exhibit in the Activities Building of the Carmel Foundation during the month of July. Hours for viewing are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1 to 5 p.m. on weekends.

Jung group studies expressing the unconscious

Sandplay theory and technique will be the subject of a lecture/discussion/slide presentation 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 27 at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

This is the last of the current series of activities sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C. G. Jung, and will be conducted by Rory McEwen, M.A., M.F.C.C., of Carmel, and Kathleen A. Baer, M.S., of Carmel Valley.

This event, which is open to the public, demonstrates that sandplay provides a means of expressing unconscious images of the psyche in a concrete, symbolic way. Also, the basic principles of the technique as they apply to Jungian theory will be presented through lecture and discussion.

The group is an informal association of people who are finding mutual support while enlarging their knowledge of Jung's psychological insights.

"Applications of those insights to our everyday lives are often enhanced by discussions with others who have kindred interests," according to the group's statement of purpose.

After a year of activity, the group now numbers more than 300 persons. Descriptions of its July-September programs will be available soon. To receive more information, the public is invited to write the Friends of C. G. Jung at 853 Pacific St., Monterey, or call 649-8809.

Registration fee for the sandplay event is $10.
